TREATY IS URGENT, SAYS TAFT

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 11.—President Taft struck another sledge-hammer blow for Canadian reciprocity here to-day. In a speech before the members of the Illinois Legislature he issued warning that the policy of a protective tariff hinged upon the approval of the agreement reached between American and Canadian representatives.

"The very exercise of the policy depends upon our abolition of tariff where it is not really needed, under the principle of the last Republican platform," he declared. "If we persist in retaining it in those times of high prices and gradually exhausting food supply, and lose our retention upon protection principles, we shall raise an opposition that will know no moderation and will not cease radical economic changes until it has removed from the statute books the last trace of a protective tariff."

The President said in part:

The President's Address.

"I thank you for this opportunity to address you. I am honored by your invitation, and I hope I shall not violate the proprieties of the occasion if I ask your attention to legislation now pending in the Congress of the United States, which I regard of nation-wide and most critical importance. I refer to the so-called Canadian reciprocity agreement.

"The Payne tariff law contained what is known as the 'maximum and minimum' tariff clause, by which the President was authorized and directed to investigate the tariff duties and trade restrictions imposed by each country with which the United States had dealings, in order to determine whether these tariff duties or trade restrictions were discriminating against the United States and her imports and trade, as compared with the duties and trade restrictions imposed by against other countries. This led me, through the State Department, and with the assistance of Secretary Knox and experts whom he summoned, to an investigation of the tariff duties of Canada, and the negotiations thus brought about were carried to a successful conclusion by the assurance on our part that we would be glad to take up further negotiations, looking to further reductions of duties on both sides in the form of a reciprocity treaty.

"I Am a Protectionist."

"I am a protectionist. That is, I believe that there are certain industries in this country which need the encouraging effect of a tariff upon imports from foreign countries to enable them to pay good wages and furnish a reasonable profit to those who engage in them.

"There was a time when leading Republicans thought that there was no danger of having a tariff higher than necessary to protect any industry. But the competition to combine by which the price could be controlled and thus be a perpetual tariff taken advantage of, led to a modification of the protection theory and to a declaration that the protective duty of any industry ought not to exceed the tariff imposed more than the difference between the cost of production abroad, the cost of production here, and enough to give a fair profit to the domestic producer or manufacturer.

"This limitation of the protection theory necessarily took away any grounds for a tariff between this country and any country in which the conditions of productions were substantially the same.

Conditions Practically the Same.

"The conditions of production and of manufacture in the United States and in Canada are substantially the same. Wages may differ in one part of Canada from another part, just as wages differ in different States in this country, but taken by the large, the character of the laborers, their intelligence and their skill, and the price paid them per unit of work, they are not substantially less in Canada than they are in this country. In other words, the plank in the platform of the last Republican convention, carried to its logical conclusion, would lead to substantial free trade with Canada.—From the President's reciprocity speech to the National Legislature.

BIG POINT WON FOR CROCKER

Despite the strenuous objection of District Attorney Pelletier, Judge Stevens in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court allowed the motion of Charles F. Choate, counsel for George E. Crocker, to allow him to examine all the papers, letters and documents in possession of the district attorney to be used as evidence in the Crocker case.

This is one of the most important decisions ever handed down by a Judge of the Massachusetts Superior Court. It is a precedent.

Crocker, who is a former city treasurer of Boston, and a member of the original Finance Commission, is charged, with conspiracy to corrupt jurors in connection with the contest over the will of his father, Uriel H. Crocker.

John J. Conroy, a Boston constable, is charged with the same offence. In addition both are charged, together with Charles R. Leach of Lynn, with being accessories after the fact in intending and concealing one accused of felony, namely, William J. Harnett, who was indicted for doing the actual bribing.

Pelletier's Statement.

After the court's decision District Attorney Pelletier issued a statement to the press in which he makes his position clear and declares that the public should know his position, as he is responsible to the people for the conduct of his office. His statement is as follows:

"The decision of Judge Stevens allowing the motion of counsel in the case of Commonwealth vs. George E. Crocker et al. for leave to see the exhibition of writings to be used as evidence in the trial of the cause is final.

"The motion was granted against my opposition, and it is the first time in the history of criminal trials in this State, so far as I have been able to discover, that the court has gone so far in compelling a district attorney to show his evidence to the defendant's counsel before trial.

"It means that hereafter in all criminal cases counsel will seek to have the court allow them to see the exhibits of the government to assist them in the preparation of their defence.

State Is Handicapped.

"The District Attorney is at a great disadvantage already in that he cannot take exception to the admission or exclusion of evidence or to the charge of the court to the jury, rights which are jealously guarded to the defendant.

"If now in addition to this disadvantage the government is to be obliged to show its exhibits, its documentary evidence such as letters, written instruments, standards of handwriting, etc., the Commonwealth is to be greatly handicapped in the trial of cases and requittals of guilty men will become far more frequent under the skilful management of clever and ingenious counsel and their clients who will be prepared to meet any such evidence offered by the District Attorney.

"My policy has been to give the defendant fair play and to ask a verdict against no man unless the evidence fairly warrants it. I have many times publicly stated that I believe the District Attorney owes a direct duty to protect the defendant from unjust accusation and unfair evidence and methods.

ONE DEAD FROM GAS; 2 DYING

One is dead and two are dying as the result of coal gas in a Chelsea home. Frederick Tyler, seventeen years old, is dead. The family with whom he stayed, Francesco Giardiello and his wife, Anna May, are dying at the Frost Hospital. The tragedy occurred at the home of the couple, No. 187 Williams street.

The parents of the Tyler boy are inconsolable. He left his home at No. 200 Williams street just as he was going to bed because his father had scolded him. Only partially clothed, he ran across the street to stay with his friends, the Giardiellos.

The Giardiellos and the Tyler boy all slept in the front room of the house. There is a small parlor stove in the room. Gas from this killed the boy and will probably cause the death of the two others.

Found by Mother.

The three were found by Mrs. Tyler, mother of the dead boy. She became worried because her son had not come home. She went over to the house where he had spent the night.

Entering the front room she found him dead, lying on a couch in one corner of the room. Frightened, she ran to tell a police officer. With the officer she made another search of the room. Giardiello was found on the floor at the foot of the bed. His wife was found partially out of bed on the further side.

It is the belief of the police that both Giardiello and his wife were awakened by the suffocating effects of the gas and tried to get up and to the windows. They were not successful, as was indicated by the positions in which they were found.

When the police officer entered the house he found four dogs, all pets of Giardiello's, in the hall. The dogs were unhurt but a canary bird in the room in which the three victims slept, was dead.

Medical assistance was summoned as soon as the officer saw what had happened. Dr. J. B. Schoolcraft worked over the Tyler boy for some time. He was unable to revive him. He then gave the other two stimulants and ordered them hurried to the Frost Hospital. Here their lives were immediately placed on the dangerous list. The authorities held out little hope of their recovery.

Friend of Family.

The Giardiellos came to Chelsea less than six months ago. They had been married but a short time ago in Avon. The Tyler boy was very friendly with the husband, who was a tonsetor, and rode with him often on his team.

Just before he went to bed his sister, Charles Tyler, called him into his room and told him that he had done wrong in scolding him. When the boy left him he went to his own room. Suddenly he decided to leave the house. He was cold only in his coat sweater and his underwear. In these garments he ran to his friend's house and asked to sleep there for the night.

TWENTY LOSE LIVES IN BUILDING COLLAPSE

BRUSSELS, Feb. 11.—The German machinery hall at the Brussels exposition collapsed to-day. Three bodies were recovered from the ruins shortly after the disaster and seven injured persons were removed to hospitals. Ambulances from all sections of the city were summoned and Belgian troops began removing the debris in the belief that many persons had lost their lives.

The weight of the machinery in the building is believed to have caused the collapse. Cracks appeared in many of the other buildings as a result of the shock and the ground for two miles in the vicinity was shaken, as if by an earthquake.

At 12:15 the physicians issued the following bulletin:

"Archbishop Ryan's condition is more serious than ever. He is in a comatose state and his strength is gradually failing."

U. S. TRANSPORT REPORTED SUNK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Officials of the War and Navy Departments were excited to-day when they were told of a report in circulation at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., that a transport en route to the Philippines, with the Seventh Cavalry on board, had sunk at sea.

The report said that the transport Thomas was the vessel lost, but it was learned at the War Department that this vessel is now safely moored at San Francisco.

The Seventh Cavalry, however, is on its way to the Philippines on board the transport Sheridan. It sailed from San Francisco on February 6, and is due at Honolulu on February 15. Though the officials believe that if there could be a disaster it would have been reported by wireless they are nevertheless taking steps to ascertain if there is any truth in the report.

HELD FOR GIVING PRISONER LIQUOR

After being released from the prisoners' dock in East Boston Police Court, on the promise to pay his $10 fine before February 23 on the charge of drunkenness, David J. O'Grady, thirty-three, of No. 3 Houghton court, East Boston, was rearrested on the charge of having given liquor to a prisoner. Edward J. Wagner was sentenced to ten days in the House of Correction for drunkenness, and not having his coat and hat to start. O'Grady offered to bring it to him. He left the courtroom, but shortly returned, with the clothing, saying that on a bench in the hall he met to the prisoners' dock, court having adjourned, and spoke to Wagner. Probation Officer Charles Taylor saw O'Grady slip a bottle of whiskey to Wagner, and had O'Grady locked up. He will be arraigned in court on Monday.

CANOES BURNED AT AUBURNDALE

A fire early to-day in the canoe factory of J. R. Robertson on Charles street, Auburndale, threatened the whole neighborhood, which is filled with farmhouses and wooden dwellings. Patrolman Joseph Senior smelled smoke a quarter of a mile away and prevented a disastrous fire.

When he found the factory he saw the reflection through the windows, gave the alarm and aroused occupants of several dwellings.

The fire started near the boiler in the basement. Working up to the first floor, it destroyed a number of unfinished canoes.

Opposite the factory are the boathouses of the Newton Boat Club, the Boston Athletic Association and of private individuals, in which a thousand canoes are stored. The direction of the wind and the quick work of the firemen probably saved these from destruction. The loss was about $1,000.

CHAMBER DECLARES FOR TRADE TREATY

The directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, at their meeting yesterday, voted to endorse heartily the elimination of all exchange of commodities between the United States and Canada. This vote of the directors will be submitted to the members at the annual meeting, February 21, for further endorsement. The motion that was passed is as follows: "Voted, that the directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce are heartily in favor of a reciprocal exchange of commodities between the United States and Canada, believing that such an interchange of commodities on proper terms would be of great advantage to both countries and that the unnatural barriers to trade between the two countries which man has erected should no longer exist undisturbed."

ENGINE CRIPPLED, TRAFFIC TIED UP

On account of the blowing out of a valve on an outward-bound passenger engine at Cambridge station on the Boston & Maine Railroad at 7 o'clock, many persons were prevented from reaching their places of business in town until several hours later. Traffic was tied up at the station for nearly two hours. The engine crew were slightly scalded when the valve blew out. Engineer Mann and his fireman jumped when steam filled the cab.

OPERATION ON KAISER NECESSARY

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—Alarming reports as to the health of Emperor William were circulated here to-day. One was to the effect that he is soon to undergo an operation. In connection with this it was said that the real reason for the recall of Crown Prince Eitel Frederick from his Oriental trip was the decision of the Emperor to prepare his oldest son at once for the duties of state.

Encouraging reports of the Emperor's condition still come from his attending physicians, who state that he is suffering from a slight attack of influenza. But it is believed that this has resulted in a recurrence of the affection of the ear which had troubled the Kaiser for many years.

No official statement has ever been issued explaining the recall of the Crown Prince, it having been at various times attributed to the prevalence of the bubonic plague in the far East and jealousy on the part of the Crown Princess with reference to a position which her husband had paid to beautiful women on the journey.

SAN FRANCISCO GETS PANAMA EXPOSITION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The Senate to-day passed without objection the Kahn resolution authorizing the President to invite foreign nations to participate in the exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal.

REBUKES POLICEMAN FOR WOMAN'S ARREST

Patrolman Sherman of Station 6 in South Boston was censured by Judge Fabens of the South Boston District court to-day for arresting Mrs. Della Sheehan of No. 7½ Third street yesterday on a charge of drunkenness. Fabens ordered the prisoner discharged. Her husband was found guilty of a similar charge and of assaulting his wife, fines of $3 each being imposed by the court. "If this woman was drunk when she visited the police station yesterday, it was because she was compelled to do so to complain about her husband," said the judge. "What was the time to arrest her? You had no right to go to her home and drag her out on the street. I order the discharge of the woman."

PRECINCT 6, WARD 20, TO BE REDISTRICTED

Precinct 6 of Ward 20 will be redistricted through an order which Councilor Walter L. Collins will introduce in the City Council Monday. The precinct now contains more than 1,000 voters, 1,024 being cast at the last city election. Under the law 1,000 is the limit for a precinct and when more than that number is cast the election commissioners are obliged to change the lines. Ward 20 has 11,622 registered voters. Precinct 14, at Randolph and Bowdoin street, has within ninety votes of the limit allowed by law, and Precinct 6, at Hancock street, has within ninety-seven votes of the legal limit. Precinct 6, which will be redistricted, is on Baldwin street.

JACOBSON IS HELD IN BANKRUPT CASE

Abram Jacobson, one of five defendants who were brought by the bankruptcy court charging fire men with concealing assets, was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes this morning in $1,000 for a hearing next Tuesday. Jacobson was arrested in Worcester.

The other defendants are Attorney William Barack and Robert Kenedy, a Roxbury grocer. The charge declares that the three are banded in a conspiracy to assign most to Barack after the bankruptcy of Jacobson was declared. Jacobson was a jeweler on Hanover street.

CAR CONDUCTOR OF HAVERHILL SUICIDE

HAVERHILL, Feb. 11.—William T. Phinney, a street railway conductor, was found dead to-day with a gas tube in his mouth at his lodging, No. 20 Portland street. He was formerly a provision dealer in Boston, where his widow lives. He leaves a brother, Charles, in Arlington and another named Augustus in Stoughton.

AIRSHIP SCOUT VISITS JUAREZ

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 11.—In spite of the warning that he might be fired on by Federal troops, Charles K. Hamilton flew across the border into Mexico and made the first aeroplane reconnaissance ever attempted in time of war.

Rising from the aviation grounds on the American side of the river, Hamilton in a biplane crossed directly over the Mexican custom house, circled over the defenses of Juarez and returned to the American side of the river.

Garros, in his monoplane, left the ground shortly after Hamilton and also crossed the river, though his flight did not cover as much territory as did Hamilton's.

Hamilton was allowed to make the flight by the American officers in charge of the border patrol, on condition that he would divulge no information he might acquire in his flight. When he brought his machine to the ground he declared: "There seems to be quite an army in Juarez."

Blow up Railroad Bridges.

A detachment of insurrecto soldiers under Captain Angeles of General Orozco's command blew up two bridges on the Northwestern railway near San Jose early to-day, tearing up fifteen miles of railroad track and making it impossible for General Navarro with his 1,000 soldiers to reach Juarez to-day.

Navarro was 67 miles south of Juarez this morning, his troop train stalled between a burned out bridge in front and dynamited trackage in the rear. By Courier he apprised Colonel Rabago that he would arrive in Juarez this afternoon. He is not expected to reach the border city now before next week.

The country through which Navarro's men must proceed is hostile with bands of guerillas who have taken advantage of conditions to create a reign of anarchy and terror.

Federal leaders in Juarez declared to-day that could Navarro and his 1,000 troops arrive at Juarez before Monday night it would put at an end all possibility of the rebels capturing the city, even should they be reinforced by all the insurrecto forces now operating in northern Chihuahua.

Fight Navarro's Advance.

Yesterday and last night the rebels blew up six bridges on the Northwestern and the Mexican Central and destroyed about one hundred miles of trackage. Many trains are stalled and the roads are ordering new handcars because the rebels have seized all the old ones.

The insurrectos are contesting every step of Navarro's progress. The few Federal army surgeons on both sides had their hands full to-day with the sick. General Orozco himself is suffering from a bad cold due to his having given his coat to a wounded soldier.

MYSTERY GIRL IN PLANT SUIT

Revelations, based on her own investigations of the unusual interest, she asserts, was taken by her husband in the welfare of Kitty Hadley, afterwards known as Kathryn Haberly, once a waitress in the model restaurant in the Plant shoe factory in Rostory, is the basis of the $1,500,000 divorce suit of Mrs. Thomas G. Plant against the millionaire shoe manufacturer, recently retired from business.

Mrs. Plant was her own detective in obtaining evidence which attorneys acting for her in the divorce proceedings assert will show that Mr. Plant's interest in the young woman who formerly waited on him in his restaurant was not wholly inspired by philanthropic motives.

Mrs. Plant's first clew was obtained when she found a check account with the name of a person who formerly had been employed in the factory. A request to the bank for the address of the person brought Mrs. Plant to a village in New York, but she missed the object of her quest when she reached the place. Then she began an investigation that led to the discovery of her husband's philanthropy.

From Poverty to Luxury.

Then followed the discovery that the timid little English girl, who up to eighteen months ago held an obscure position in the big Plant establishment, was now the central figure in a fashionable hotel in New York city, being educated under the tutelage of a companion, enjoying grand opera and other social and dramatic treats and plentifully supplied with motley and costly clothes. In her application for a divorce she did not specifically name the correspondent. She simply alleges that there is such a woman known to her "only on information."

Equipped with the information supplied exclusively by their client, Mrs. Plant's lawyers served the divorce writ and an attachment for $1,500,000 against the Plant properties.

Mrs. Plant will make the specific charge that her husband was in the company of a woman on Friday, October 7, 1910, in places where Plant and the woman are alleged to have been include Bangor and Calais, Me., St. George, Vendu of Charlotte, Province of New Brunswick, and New York.

Companion Tell: Story.

In her search for evidence Mrs. Plant uncovered a romance she had been unfamiliar with. She found that Mr. Plant had taken a keen interest in the former waitress.

As told to Mrs. Plant, her story is said to be as follows:

"Some time late in the Summer of 1909 I replied to an advertisement asking for a companion to a girl whose education had been neglected. I received an answer from a man whose name alone was sufficient recommendation. He called at my home and told me about the girl I was expected to educate. He said: 'The girl has been sadly neglected. She was brought up in England by her aunt after the death of her parents, and through a remarkable happening she found her wealthy relatives in this country. My brother and I have decided it is up to us to see that the girl betters herself and is given her position in society.'

Visits to Boston.

"This is what the man told me, and I agreed to take the position. A few days later I took charge of my pupil, who had an apartment in a fashionable hotel in New York. As my instructions were to give the girl constant attention, I was never away from me only at such times as our benefactor came to visit. Then she accompanied him to dinner, but always returned at a certain time, as I had instructed her. The first time that the girl absented herself was during the Hudson-Fulton celebration, when she went to Boston, going to visit friends in Ruggles street, Boston. She stayed away a week. Again during the Christmas holidays she was away for some days. It was during that time that I found a letter which gave me a great surprise.

"This letter, with other papers, is now in the possession of Mrs. Plant, our present lawyers. Before I found the note I had made a careful investigation of the recommendations which the girl's benefactor gave me and I was perfectly satisfied that when I consulted the man's lawyer in the Singer building. Up to the time of finding the letter the girl had made considerable progress in her education.

"We were regular attendants at the opera, and saw the best shows in the city. The young woman received many presents, and it was planned to have her take a musical course. We had also arranged to tour the principal cities in Europe to complete her education.

"When I confronted the girl with the letter she broke down and told me that she had carried out a deception, as she had no knowledge of kinship with her benefactor.

"Soon after I left the situation a woman called at my home and introduced herself as a friend of Mrs. Plant. She questioned me closely about the girl whom I knew as Kathryn Haberly. It was arranged to see the woman at her hotel in New York, and there I learned she was the wife of the shoe manufacturer.

"After Mrs. Plant and the girl's companion had several interviews the wife of the manufacturer became an investigation which brought her in contact with the employes of the shoe factory which since January 1 has been operated by the United Shoe Machinery Co. Then a staff of lawyers was engaged by Mrs. Plant to bring suit for divorce.

Waited on the "Boss."

Employes in the shoe factory have been wondering for months at the disappearance of Kitty Hadley, who until eighteen months ago was a waitress in the company restaurant. Miss Hadley came to the factory a poor girl fresh from England. She was slightly lame and very timid. She was assigned to a station at the lunch counter, and there worked until there came a vacancy in the private dining room where Mr. Plant took his lunch.

"We are short of help," said the manager of the company restaurant one day. "You may wait on the boss."

"Oh, that is very hard, I am not such an expert as waiting," replied Kitty, as she reluctantly took her assignment.

From that day until six months afterward Miss Hadley's duties was a white. Mrs. Stratton, who is still employed in the factory.

There were other close friends of the girl who were considerably surprised when she announced her intention of resigning. To Mrs. Stratton, who lives not far from Ruggles street, Roxbury, Miss Hadley said nothing of her plans nor her reason for leaving the factory.

"Kitty just went away all of a sudden," said her friend. "Then I heard of her marriage before I saw her again. She was dressed to perfection when she called on me about a year ago and she told me she had established a position as maid to a wealthy family in New York. In her new position she said she had made enough money to get on comfortably and take lessons in singing and other things.

"Although Kit and myself were friends she never told me where she was working and she never wrote me a letter after she left the factory. The nearest I came to knowing about the whole thing. She looked so different after her absence from Boston and I believed what she told me about her change in luck."

Tells About Girl.

William Stratton, husband of Mrs. Stratton, said to-day that he knew "Kitty" Hadley and that she often came to visit at his house on Ruggles street. Mr. Stratton said:

"My wife and I first met 'Kitty' Hadley four or five years ago. Kitty was employed in the restaurant at the factory. My wife met her in the factory. My wife and Kitty became very friendly. The girl at the time lived in some street near the factory. She frequently visited my wife and daughter at our house.

"About two years ago Kitty went away from Boston. She went to some town on Cape Cod. About eight months after she left Boston she came to visit us. That was in the Summer of 1909. She stayed for four or five days. She came from some point up the Hudson River, so she said, at the time she was a companion for some literary woman who lived at some point on the Hudson River. We have received several postals from her since then. She has not been in Boston, however, and there was no writing to tell that she had changed her position. I believe she is still in New York State. When she was on here she went to several places of amusement with my daughter Jenny, who is a stenographer in the Plant factory."

ECZEMA CURE A BEAUTY WASH.

Although D. D. D. Prescription has been recognized for years as the one remedy for Eczema, Psoriasis, and all other forms of skin diseases, it is now known that there is no other wash, even those used by the beauty specialists, that can compare with this mild liquid for cleaning the skin of pimples, blackheads, rash, and all similar skin affections.

For this reason alone, a bottel of D. D. D. should be kept on hand in every household. A trial 25c bottle will show you the merits of this great remedy as a complexion wash.

D. D. D. seems to remove the cause, whatever the trouble may be, cleansing the skin, and leaving it as soft, as smooth and clear as that of a healthy child.

Get a 25c bottle to-day and keep it in the house.

TEN VOTES FOR SUNDAY COUPON

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

One of those persons you sometimes meet, whose intellect needs a little "intensive farming," tried to get gay yesterday with the Contest Editor. This person came right up and asked:

"Say, if it takes a man one hour to walk an hour and a half, how long would it take him to run?"

The Contest Editor refused to answer without advice of counsel. Frenzied figures are not in his line just now.

When it comes to plain figures and plain facts, the Contest Editor is right there. For instance:

To-day is Saturday. A coupon in the Evening AMERICAN to-day counts you one vote toward that magnificent $8,000 home and a lot, a lot of other prizes on the side. Or toward any others of the 1,000 splendid prizes in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest.

Get a Sunday Coupon.

But to-morrow will be Sunday, and a coupon in the Sunday AMERICAN counts ten votes, ten times as much as a coupon in the Evening AMERICAN.

Have you, Mr. Contestant, got as many Sunday coupons coming your way as you should? Have you told all your friends what you are a candidate for that $8,000 home and two lots or for some one of the other prizes? Have you told your friends just what these prizes are? Have you shown them the long list? Do you realize what victory will mean to you? Do they know that the list includes seven motor automobiles, seven pianos, seven motor boats and hundreds of other valuable articles?

You need to tell your vote-collecting friends about these prizes. To keep their interest keen and active, so they will not get a coupon get by, especially the big Sunday coupons that count for ten votes each. One hundred friends turning in one Sunday coupon apiece, for instance, make an aggregate of 1,000 votes added to your contest standing. Do a little plain thinking over these plain facts and figures. Then put it to plainly to your friends.

And subscriptions, too, subscriptions to the Sunday AMERICAN.

Those word subscriptions, "surprises by himself," as Count Smorltork said in Pickwick Papers, a tremendous opportunity for vote-getting.

Special Vote Credit.

A special vote credit is given for subscriptions to the Sunday AMERICAN. Just a six-months' subscription is good for 500 votes. The longer the subscription the more votes credited. A three-year subscription is good for 5,000 votes.

Getting subscriptions to the Sunday AMERICAN is the fastest way of increasing your voting strength. It makes your standing pile up by leaps and bounds.

Remember, in each subscription, you must accompany it with a coupon cut from the Contest rules which are printed now in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Speaking of the Sunday AMERICAN, be sure to see it to-morrow. Read the Contest Editor's story, in which he makes a new and interesting announcement. Also read his fascinating advertisement in the same issue in which he gives the rules and lists of prizes.

Read over those prize lists again. Noticed how close some of the prizes come to the value of them. Think of a contest in which one prize alone is worth $8,000. This is the capital prize, the second and two lots at Riverton.

Are you a motor boat enthusiast? Think of the seven motor boats offered in the seven districts. Take that Homer motor boat, for example, in District No. 1. It is a finely-fitted, up-to-date craft of best style. The others are equally choice.

Bear in mind all the time, that there is a special February offer of fifty votes per subscription, separate from the main contest.

These prizes will be given FREE to the 53 contestants, irrespective of districts, polling the highest number of votes BY SUBSCRIPTION between February 1st and February 28th inclusive.

The fifty-third February prizes are.

One $900 Piano	$600
One Symphony Grand Graphophone	$200
One $150 Diamond Ring	$150
One $25 Wrist Watch	$50
Ten Silver Mesh Bags or ten $10 Solid Gold Mesh Bags	$100
Ten $5 Sterling Silver, Silk Umbrellas	$50
Ten $5 Solid Gold Scarf Pins	$50
Ten $4 Cameras	$40

Every vote you get for yourself in February counts toward the February special prize contest and toward the main contest as well.

In sending checks, money orders, coupons or other contest material through the mail address it to AMERICAN Contest Editor, P. O. Box 2225, Boston. See that your checks and money orders are properly endorsed and made payable to the order of the AMERICAN.

Do NOT enclose checks or money orders or any kind of remittance in the same package with coupons. Send them separately.

SWIFT DROPS GLOVER CASE

The Clarence Glover murder mystery will remain unsolved, so far as Attorney-General James M. Swift is concerned.

"Nothing has developed to warrant bringing action against any person or persons for the murder of Glover," Mr. Swift said.

"Attorney-General Malone probed into the matter as thoroughly as possible and explained the situation fully. There is nothing that can be done, so far as I can see."

"Will any further effort be made to unravel the mystery?" he was asked.

"The proper authorities will be on the lookout, of course, for evidence, but I can see no reason for any special effort. The necessary expense would be wasteful. My experience in matters of this sort tells me that there is small likelihood of the mystery ever being solved."

FUNERAL MASS FOR GALLIVAN

The funeral of Patrolman Richard J. Gallivan, who died at the Relief Hospital Thursday night, after being accidentally shot by Patrolman Patrick A. Hanley, while the two were in pursuit of three burglars early Tuesday morning, was held from St. Mark's Church in Dorchester at 10 a. m. A detail of twenty-three patrolmen escorted the body from his late residence at No. 20 Wrentham street, to the church. A high mass of requiem was offered by the Rev. Henry J. Ryan, pastor of the church. The music was under the direction of Miss Ethel Ormsby, the organist of the church.

The floral tributes were beautiful. The house was filled with them, and a number of pieces were received after the services at the church. Sprays of pure yellow roses were at the services besides those who composed the escort of honor. Among them was Captain Edward F. Gaskin of the Court Square station, to which Patrolman Gallivan was attached.

The burial took place in St. Joseph's Cemetery in West Roxbury. The pall-bearers were Patrolmen John C. Bohling, Michael Sullivan, Thomas J. Cleary, William J. Carey, James H. Toomey and Wilfred J. Sedgwick. A large representation of the South Boston Council of the Knights of Columbus, of which the deceased was a member, was present.

WHITTIER GIRL IS AGAIN SEEN

WORCESTER, Feb. 11.—Search is being made in Sterling to-day for Florence B. Whittier, the missing Ipswich girl. The police are positive she is living somewhere in the town and is trying to conceal her identity.

She was seen and recognized by three different persons, each of whom is positive they are not mistaken. It is thought the girl has been living in Sterling and is employed in Worcester. Twice a day she makes the trip between Sterling and this city on the electric cars.

Seen by Policeman.

Patrolman Tisdell of the Worcester force, who is assigned to cross walk duty at Main and Park streets, says he has seen the girl. He says his attention was first attracted by her suspicious actions and to her striking resemblance to the photographs published of the missing girl in the AMERICAN. He declares he saw her as late as yesterday afternoon.

"I was standing on the crossing about 5:30 o'clock," said Tisdell, "when a girl approached me and asked how to get to Lancaster.

"Something about her seemed striking. I thought in a minute she was the missing Whittier girl, but I was not sure at the time. She had the same hair, the long straight nose and a mouth similar to the pictures published in the AMERICAN.

"She was of medium build, but the clothing she wore differed from the description of that worn by the Whittier girl at the time of her disappearance. The clothing was of dark material. What impressed me the most, however, was the fact that when I looked into her eyes I noticed the resemblance immediately, and the girl seemed to quail under my glance and she turned away.

Took Fitchburg Car.

"I was going to question the young lady when just at that moment another girl came along and the two walked back to the sidewalk and stood chatting. The 5:30 p. m. car for Fitchburg came along and both young women boarded it. This in itself I thought strange enough, as the girl had asked me how to get to Lancaster."

Patrolman Tisdell was shown a picture of Florence Whittier by an AMERICAN reporter and he said: "That's the girl I was talking to. I am sure of it now, and if I had been as sure then I would have taken her into custody."

The conductor of the Fitchburg car which the girl boarded with her companion is also of the belief that she is the missing Whittier girl.

"She bears a striking resemblance to pictures I have seen of the Whittier girl," he said, "and in my opinion there is no doubt that that is who she is. She has ridden on my car two or three times and in each instance she has gotten off at Sterling. I think she lives somewhere in Sterling and comes in to work in Worcester. Either that or else she comes into Worcester every day looking for work.

"She has the same eyes and features of the Whittier girl and is about the same build. She is a stranger in Sterling and always appears as though she was afraid somebody was following her. When she takes her seat in the car it is generally in a corner near the front door, and whenever anybody looks in her direction she turns her head away.

"Other persons who are in the habit of riding on my car have remarked about it also, and I was on the point of asking her if she was the Whittier girl. When I come to think it over, there is no question in my mind but what she is."

ANNUAL DINNER OF DARTMOUTH ALUMNI

In total darkness, save for the soft shafts of emerald light which filtered down from the huge Dartmouth sign above the speakers' table, more than one and fifty Dartmouth alumni, in Boston and vicinity, with representatives from Harvard, Princeton, Yale, sat down to the annual reunion and banquet of the association at Hotel Somerset.

The feasting and merriment that followed were ushered in by the singing of "The Dartmouth Song." James H. Reynolds, the retiring president of the association and a member of the tariff board of the United States, presided. At his right was President Ernest Fox Nichols of Dartmouth, the guest of honor.

FASHION SHOW CLOSES TODAY

Many men went to the "Style Show" in Horticultural Hall to-day, taking advantage of early closing business in order to get a look at the new Spring styles they will be expected to pay for when the bills come home.

There was an extra large feminine attendance, too, because this 1911 Spring exhibition of the Ladies Tailors and Dressmakers' Association, which opened last Tuesday will close to-night. The women and girls who failed to take a final look at the fascinating new creations. These include such novelties as the "Spool Dress," "Pantaskirt," "Oyster Hat," "Eau Claire Gowns," "Kimona Coats," "Auto Habits," "Serpent Gown," and innumerable designs in corsets and other feminine accessories.

Boston tailors and gown makers are jubilant over the success of the exhibition.

Boston Gains Fame.

One visitor who attracted much attention during the week was Julian Eltinge, the famous feminine impersonator.

Boston designers have gained fame for themselves at this exhibition. A riding habit by S. L. Crapson has attracted much attention. It buttons up the front with trouser legs underneath, so arranged that the wearer can ride astride in the style, so popular now with smart equestrienne. When the garment is buttoned down the front it becomes again a conventional riding habit.

Mrs. Anna Watson Powell of Boston showed an "auto habit" which protects the wearer in front. It fastens in the back with four buttons. Living models demonstrate how quickly this habit may be donned.

Corset Display Feature.

The corset display has necessarily been a leading feature of the show. Miss Emma Goodwin of New York lectured daily on "The Use and Abuse of the Corset." She used living models in her lectures.

The "pantaskirt," one of the attractive novelties of the show, is a combination of men's and women's clothing. It seems like an ordinary skirt. It is buttoned in front, however. When the buttons are unfastened there is revealed an under garment nearly creased, resembling short pantaloons. These pantaloons are attached to the skirt at the belt. This gives rise to the combination name "pantaskirt." This garment is useful chiefly in riding or in active exercise, like tennis.

GOVERNOR GUEST AT REGIMENTAL BALL

Colonel John J. Sullivan and the field and staff officers of the Ninth Infantry Regiment, M. V. M., entertained 7,500 guests, headed by Governor Foss and staff, at the organization's annual ball at the regimental armory on East Newton street. Scores of officers were present, representing every regiment in the state, together with prominent army and navy officers. For nearly an hour Governor Foss assisted Colonel Sullivan in receiving the guests, being later joined by Mayor Fitzgerald.

MOTHER OF JAMES BROTHERS DEAD

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 11.—Mrs. Zerelda Samuels, mother of Frank and Jesse James, fell dead on a train as it neared this city. She will be buried beside Jesse James, who was killed by Bob Ford in St. Joseph, Mo., in 1882. Mrs. Samuels was eighty-six years old. During a battle between the James brothers and detectives at the James home, a bomb was thrown into the house and tore away one of Mrs. Samuel's arms.

ECKERT GAVE GEMS TO FORMER SERVANT GIRL

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Two days before the death of General T. T. Eckert, former president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, he gave all of his wife's jewels to Minnie Egan, the housemaid, according to R. G. Page, his secretary, who testified in the will contest. Miss Egan was married to General Eckert's son Thomas a month after the general died.

TROUSERS WORN BY WOMEN AT MASQUE

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 11.—Pretty women wore trousers at the fashionable Union Club ball masque. Miss Elizabeth Meyer, masked as a beauty of the Turkish harem. Miss Nancy Girardi chose a more modern costume. She wore blue knickerbockers, the kind affected by Dutch boys. She had a flaming red coat and woolen shoes. Miss Susie Schumann, in short skirt and flesh-ing stockings, typified a French doll.

BOSTON GIRLS OPERATE MINE

Six girl graduates of the Emerson College of Oratory are hopefully confident that they did make one lucky guess in organizing the "One Lucky Guess" Mining Company, which has taken over and will operate the mine of that name in Cripple Creek, Col. The girls, all but one of whom live in Boston, have capitalized the concern at $1,200 and already are seeing dazzling visions of diamonds, automobiles, aeroplanes, trips to Europe and other luxuries as a result of their plunge.

Girl as Manager.

The company is the first composed of women to operate in Cripple Creek. The Boston girls are Miss Helen McNary, daughter of the former Congressman; Miss Ellingsworth, daughter of a chief electrician of a Boston factory; Miss Slattery, daughter of a merchant, and Miss May Sullivan, daughter of a mattress manufacturer of Hyde Park.

The sixth member of the company is Mary Pearl Collins, the twenty-year-old daughter of a prominent county official in Cripple Creek. She will be superintendent and mine manager.

Mine Picked Out.

The first stock issued was for $1,200, each of the six members of the company subscribing $200 worth of stock. And with the company formed, and funds at hand, Miss Collins conferred with Agent Keith of the Stratton mining claim, which owns 40 acres at Cripple Creek.

Keith was struck with the idea. He lodged Miss Collins about it, but that didn't prevent him from picking out the cream of the ground for the girls—the "One Lucky Guess" property, located on the famous Ball Hill.

Miss Collins, president of the corporation, lived in South Boston from 1904 to 1909, graduating the year previous from the South Boston High School. Mrs. Edward J. Powers, one of the directors, is the wife of the president of the South Boston Citizens' Association.

CIVIL SERVICE WORKERS TO MEET

The women's auxiliary of the Massachusetts Civil Service Reform Association is to hold a conference at the Twentieth Century Club, No. 2 Joy street, February 13, at 3:30 p. m., for the consideration of measures before the Legislature. John A. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, Dr. David P. Seamell, former member of the Boston School Committee, and Arthur H. Brooks, secretary of the Massachusetts Civil Service Association, will speak.

MAYOR 47 TODAY BARS BIRTHDAYS

Mayor Fitzgerald is one more year away from the half century mark. He reached the forty-seventh milestone to-day sounding well and strong and except for a little private celebration at Wellesley spent his natal day will be uneventful.

There was a bunch of forty-seven American Beauty roses on his desk at City Hall to-day when he arrived to take up his official duties. It was a reminder from the office staff that he was one year older, but the Mayor refuses to take hints like these to slow up.

If it wasn't for the newspapers and the fact that I am remembered in some of my intimate friends, I'd forget that I had such a thing as a birthday," said the Mayor.

At Half On Age.

"How does it feel to be forty-seven?" he said in answer to a query. "Well, as far as I can conscience it feels just the same as to be forty-six. I may be a year older but if a man is only as old as he feels I have been standing still so many times that I guess I'm not much older. I guess not. I've got over having celebrations on birthdays. It's too strong a reminder that I am growing older. To-day will be just like any day or any other day. I'm too busy to think of the calendar."

The Mayor will attend not presided over the meeting of the Mayors' club at Young's at 1 p. m. At 3 he meets the school committee and the schoolhouse commissioners to lay out the construction work for the year. At 6 p. m. he has an engagement at Lexington and in the evening he will take his two sons, Fred and John F., Jr., to the B. A. A. meet in Mechanics building. He has visits from fifty or more callers to his office and the Mayor will have a busy day.

Surprise for Him.

Only the immediate family have been let in on the surprises that are in store for the Mayor when he drops his official duties and turns toward Welles avenue for a night of fun. To escape a great many invitations to parties, dances, celebrations and the like, says the Mayor, he chooses to "stay out" my social engagements, but thinking out my social engagements, but thinking out my social engagements, but here is one that I can accept. Fact is, I don't know just what kind of a celebration it's going to be, but it's an engagement I can't break."

Mutt, the Fitzgerald rooster, who can't crow, but thinks he can, tried to crow forty-seven times to-day, but quit on the nineteenth note.

DEPOSED PASTOR INVOKES GREEK SYNOD

The Rev. Nestor Soulides, deposed from the pastorate of the Greek Orthodox Church by its board of directors, has raised a point of law which is being argued to-day before Judge Pierce in the injunction proceedings brought by the Hellenic association to prevent the pastor from acting in that capacity. The Rev. Mr. Soulides claims the court is without jurisdiction, as the synod of the Greek church in Constantinople which ratified his appointment as pastor of the Boston church has sole jurisdiction.

255 INCHES OF SKIN GRAFTED ON BODY

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Burned by 6,600 volts of electricity, which made necessary one of the largest skin grafting cases ever performed, Fred G. Loll has withdrawn his suit for $75,000 damages against the Indiana Steel Company of Gary, Ind., for $15,000. He was working as an electrician when the current was turned on suddenly while he had his hand on a switch. Twenty-five friends sacrificed part of their cuticle to save Loll's life, 255 square inches of skin being used in the operation.

SKULL FRACTURED BY FALL FROM HIS CAB

After extra freight No. 575, from Portland to Boston, had passed through Lynn station, the fireman, J. F. Foss, was picked up with a fractured skull. It is believed he lost his footing while adjusting the coal. It is supposed he fell upon the fence near the track, as nine of the pickets were broken, and some of them stained with blood.

MRS. DIGNOWITY A POOR DEBTOR

Mrs. James V. Dignowity, formerly the wife of James V. Dignowity, Jr., whose career as a mining stock promoter was outlined in the Bankruptcy Court last week, was often into the Poor Debtors Court to-day by L. S. Rosen & Company, who have a bill against her for $225. Rosen & Company are dressmakers at No. 700 Boylston street. They bill is itemized as follows: One suit, $75; another suit, $75; white suit, $60, and three linen suits at $50 each.

Mrs. Dignowity was found at No. 1,231 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, where she is living with her children. She was sworn for examination to-day, but the case was continued till next Saturday.

Mrs. Dignowity was a student in Wellesley, while he was in Harvard. At the latter college, on November 4, 1903, he eloped to Providence, where they were married. A reconciliation with her parents followed, Dignowity's mother visiting the couple while they lived in Philadelphia for a time. They returned to Allston last December and obtained a divorce a month later.

When the Rosen firm sued Mrs. Dignowity it contested on the ground that her husband was responsible for the debts she contracted while living with him. The court ruled against her, however, and she was sent into the Poor Debtor Court on the statement that she is now destitute and unable to pay.

GET RID OF SNOW BY SHIPPING IT SOUTH

CENTRALIA, Ill., Feb. 11.—The Illinois Central railroad has discovered a new way of disposing of snow in the Chicago yards. Once a hundred cars of snow have passed through there en route to New Orleans. The snow starts melting south of here, and before Kentucky is reached it is all gone. The cars are loaded with coal in Kentucky for shipment north. The railroad company claims this is a cheaper way of disposing of snow than carting it to Lake Michigan.

HOME FOR CHICAGO WORKING GIRLS

BOULDER CREEK, Col., Feb. 11.—Ground has been broken for a stone cottage near the boulder Chautauqua grounds which is to be used as a home for the working girls of Chicago. The project was started in October by Mrs. James Sherwood, president of the art and literary department of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, and money is being raised by selling shares of stock to the working women of Chicago.

NEW SUIT ON MRS. EDDY WILL

Officials of the Christian Science Church will fight to the end any attempt made by the sons of Mary Baker G. Eddy to secure control of the copyrights of "Science and Health" and other writings of the cult's late founder.

Announcement to this effect was made in New York by Eugene H. Cox, chairman of the publicity committee of the Christian Science Church, following publication of the report that a legal battle would be begun by Mrs. Eddy's heirs, George W. Glover and Dr. J. Foster Eddy.

Apparently Dr. Eddy and Mr. Glover, Mrs. Eddy's sons, are not in publicity, Mr. Cox said. Their attorney, W. F. Chandler, in his visit to Greek Mrs. Eddy's home at Concord, Mass., August, never paper attention than in any other way. His efforts, one would think, have been made more in the interest of Mrs. Christian Scientists. He has not superceded and he never will. He is a safe bet that Chandler and Mr. Nourse are to be true. The board will stand to protect the interests of the church.

Members of the Christian Science Board of Directors said that no notice had been received of the suit, and that none is expected, because the entire story seems to be a publicity scheme. It was given out when the pending suits by Glover and Peter Eddy were tried a month or more ago.

WORST COLDS BROKEN AND GRIPPE MISERY RELIEVED IN FEW HOURS.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

It is a positive fact that a dose of Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold either in the head, chest, back, stomach, limbs or any part of the body. It promptly relieves the most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this harmless Compound as directed with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will break up a cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects, as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

When Julian Eltinge—the famous impersonator of beautiful feminine types—now playing the Boston Theatre—starts to reduce his waist line from 38 to 23 inches he must consider three things in corsets. He must show style, or the female contingent of his audience will criticize—he must have strength in his corset, or dire results may happen—he must wear a serviceable corset, or lose his shape, a very essential feature in Eltinge impersonations.

The famous R. & G. CORSETS do wonders for Eltinge—as the above order will indicate.

ROTHSCHILD IS DEAD IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—Baron Albert Rothschild, head of the famous family of bankers and one of the richest men in America, died here today. He had been in poor health ever since the suicide of his son, Baron Oskar Rothschild.

Oskar Rothschild fell in love with Miss Olga Mann, daughter of a Chicago physician, and in 1909 his father was informed that the match intended marrying her. The message came to him by cable, and it also stated that Miss Mann was an actress. The old baron forbade the match.

Oskar went back to his father's palace in Vienna and shot himself. The bullet came from which Baron Albert never recovered.

LAURIER APPEALS TO CANADIANS TO AID TRADE PACT

It is impossible for the government to frame a tariff policy that will bring prosperity to all interests in common unless some are willing to make small sacrifices on the altar of the common good. The government has to consider conflicting opinion and endeavor to evolve some system which will reconcile opposing demands and be acceptable to all. We have given this matter our very best consideration.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canadian Premier, on reciprocity.

RECIPROCITY BILL REPORTED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The House Ways and Means Committee to-day voted to report the McCall bill embodying the Canadian reciprocity treaty.

Canadian reciprocity treaty. It was reported this afternoon.

Though a privileged matter, the committee ordered a rule for limitation of debate and to prevent amendments and agreed that the bill would be reported to the House at once.

The action of the committee presages success in the House. When the committee met at 10:30 it was apparent that the bill would be successful. Ten members were on hand carrying the vote which had been set for to-day. Outside the committee room were grouped many correspondents and members of Congress.

At 10 o'clock Representative Hill of Connecticut, one of the advocates of the treaty, arrived. He was followed by Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, who is opposed. There followed a few minutes later Representative Dwight of New York, Republican "whip," who informed the President from time to time that he could not support the treaty, and Representative Calder of Brooklyn, who is also opposed.

In a few minutes Representative Boutelle of Illinois, Brantley of Georgia, and Representative Fitzgerald of Massachusetts arrived. Next came Representatives Broussard of Louisiana, Clark of Missouri, Hobson of New York, and Underwood of Alabama.

McCall in the Chair.

Representative Haines of West Virginia, Randall of Texas and McCall of Massachusetts, acting chairman, arrived next, and were closely followed by Representative Harris of Oregon and Pou of North Carolina.

The floor of the committee was closed at 10:35 and the committee was called to order by Acting Chairman McCall. All the members of the committee were present except Payne of New York, who is still confined to his home by illness.

The first matter taken up by the committee was for amendment offered yesterday to make clear that clause in the agreement dealing with pulp wood and print paper. This was the only point in controversy among the committeemen. After the members had exchanged their views on the subject and it was made clear that the printed paper and pulp wood clause should be modified so that there can be no doubt as to what the committeemen intended to be included in those subjects, the amendment was adopted.

The Vote.

Those who voted to report the bill favorably were Representative McCall, Massachusetts; Boutell, Illinois; Hill, Connecticut; Longworth, Ohio; Needham, California; Clark, Missouri; Underwood, Alabama; Randall, Texas; Harrison, New York; Brantley, Georgia, and Pou, North Carolina.

Against the bill were Dalzell, Pennsylvania; Fordney, Michigan; Ellis, Oregon; Dwight, New York; Calder, Brooklyn, and Broussard, Louisiana.

The report contains statistics data showing the value and amount of products reported from the United States to Canada, thus emphasizing the contention of the Democratic leaders that Canada is a better customer of the United States and that much of the free picture to consumers in the United States.

Bill Will Pass Monday.

Unless there is a change in the program of the leaders the bill be passed by the House Monday by a large majority and will then go to the Senate.

The vote on the measure by parties was as follows: For, Republicans 3, Democrats 6; against, Republicans 3, Democrats 1.

Had the Democrats voted against the measure it would have been decidedly lost. When the bill gets to the Senate it will not be railroaded. While a careful poll of the Senate shows that there is a majority of at least five in favor of reciprocity, the bill may be scanned by committee and its opponents be able to resist all efforts to have it reported.

On the other hand, Republican leaders who favor reciprocity are confidently claiming that the measure will pass without trouble.

WILLIAMS DISCHARGED.

George J. Williams, thirty, of the South End, was discharged when arraigned in the Municipal Court for attempted larceny. Williams was arrested Tuesday by Patrolman Littlefield while Williams was trying to sell a package supposed to contain three pounds of tobacco to Joseph Kester at No. 161 Washington street.

TAFT SPEAKS FOR RECIPROCITY

form of the last Republican convention, applied to its logical conclusion, would lead to substantial free trade with Canada.

"A reciprocity agreement to-day will take, and my impression is that when you examine closely this agreement you will congratulate yourselves that we were able to make one that covered so wide a range of subjects.

"The criticism that it is a manufacturer's agreement as far as it is a suggestion that we are prompted by manufacturers to avoid competition on any of their goods is wholly unfounded.

Canada Has Protection, Too.

"The criticism, in so far as it relates to a limited scope of the agreement with reference to reductions on manufactured goods, is due to the fact that already stated that Canada has herself a system of protection, that she fears the competition of our larger and better organized industries and that she could not hope to secure a confirmation of the agreement by the Parliament if the reduction in duties on manufactured goods was made any wider.

"The truth is, as between Canada and ourselves, a reciprocity agreement must of necessity relate more to agricultural products than to manufactures. Here we stand upon more of an equality. Here in our three thousand miles of border we shall inject agricultural products from Canada to the United States at one point and exchange them at another for the products of the same agricultural products at another. In other words, the great benefit of this treaty is the profit in mutual exchange that will come in respect to the agricultural products of both. I do not wish to minimize the advantage that Canada has often to be this treaty in the reduction on manufactured articles.

"We already export into Canada the great variety of manufactured articles and merchandise over the tariff wall that she has raised—$212,000,000 out of a total of $300,000,000 of our entire country's trade, where of $375,000,000. Those reductions on manufactured goods are quite certain to increase this proportion and to enlarge the control which the United States is likely to have over their market for manufactured goods.

"But the farmer says that he is entitled to protection as much as the manufacturer. Under the principle of protection I hold down to the platform, that depends upon the question whether the system of production is different in Canada from what it is in the United States, and, speaking in large terms, the conditions of production are the same. If anything, with respect to the agricultural products, the United States has the great advantage, because the products of its soil are of much greater variety, and the area of its soil can be diversified much more profitably than is Canada.

Shows Gains to Farmers.

The President then described in detail the basis of agreement in the treaty and the various reductions that have been made in import duties by Canada and the United States. He described how Illinois farmers, and manufacturers would benefit by reciprocity. Continuing, he said:

"The increase of our population and the reduction of our farm exports are going on so rapidly that unless a great increase in production is brought about within our borders we shall soon consume all that we raise and shall need a source of food supply like that of Canada, right at our doors. We shall be blind, indeed, if we reject this golden opportunity to add to the strength and virility of our country by thus increasing our self-supporting capacity. We do not become entirely commercially in such a way as to add great strength to both.

"There are those who oppose reciprocity as who hang back from an approval of this agreement on the ground that it is a departure from the principles of protection, and is the opening wedge to fix in free trade. My own view is that no step could be taken more in the direction of a reasonable policy of pro ection than the approval of this treaty. The very existence of the policy depends on the abolition of the tariff where it is not really needed under the principle of the best Republican platform.

Warning to High Tariff Men.

"If we persist in retaining it in these times of high prices and exhaustion of the soil and base our retention on protection principles, we shall rouse an opposition that will know no moderation and will result in radical economic changes until it has removed from the statute book at least trace of a protective tariff.

"I think I can say without fear of an expert tariff commission or board, and the conviction about which my own reasonable protective tariff may be determined and just one and if the existing schedules are too high that they should be lowered to the just measure and to the level of the difference in cost of production between the countries can be limited to the fair duties against Canadian products necessary to equalize this rule as to the measure of protection.

"We have taken up these things that are involved in a Canadian reciprocity treaty because opportunity offered now that is accepted time. We are Canada, the need she is at the parting of the ways. Shall she go eastward commercially and much separated from us as if she were on the ocean or shall her people and our people profit by the proximity that has preserved to us ties and stimulates the trade across the border that has built up a useless, illogical and unnecessary tariff wall created?

Y. M. C. A. WOULD CONFER DEGREES

The Boston Y. M. C. A. has introduced into the Legislature a bill asking that degrees of Bachelor of Commercial Science and Master of Commercial Science may be granted by graduates from the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce and Finance. It is believed that these degrees will give the students a greater incentive to work, and also that the high standard of the school should be recognized by the State in allowing these degrees to the association's students.

A brief setting forth reasons why the school should be allowed to confer the degrees, and also facts about the school has been printed for members of the Legislature. This brief argues that since schools of like nature connected with colleges and universities in this country give such degrees the Y. M. C. A. School, which covers fully as thorough a course in commerce and finance and which has as capable instructors and directors, should be given the same privilege.

Among the directors of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce and Finance are Dean Edwin F. Gay of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and Dean Joseph F. Johnson of the School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance of New York University. Both of these well-known business men of New England are also on the board of directors.

The course of study for the degree will consist of three years, forty-two weeks each, seven hours each week, or a total of 882 hours. The course is especially adapted for men who work during the day and can spend their evenings in study. It is what might be termed a part-time school of advanced type. It was started four years ago, and enrolls nearly the same courses to be found in the graduate schools of commerce and finance of the large colleges and universities.

FORBIDS SON TO WED MISS CLARK

John H. Proctor, a Brookline contractor, to-day announced that if his son, Joseph H., marries Miss Gertrude Irene Clarke, correspondent in the Sumner divorce case tried at Plymouth, he will have to hunt for a new job and earn his own living.

Proctor is the wealthy young man whose engagement to Miss Clarke was announced the morning before she took the stand at Plymouth to explain how a pink ribbon alleged to belong to her nightdress found its way into the room of Earl A. M. Sumner, proprietor of the Brant Rock Hotel.

"My son met Miss Clarke about four or five months ago when he was working in Milton, where I understand she lived for a time," said Mr. Proctor. "I met Miss Clarke once on a car and I know that she is very attractive. But beyond that I know nothing of her.

"Joe has never been at Brant Rock. I don't believe he ever had any intention of marrying Miss Clarke, one or whatever she may be, and if he did, it was without my knowledge or consent. Her mother said Joe was wealthy. That makes me laugh, for he works for me and all he has got is what he earns.

"One thing is pretty certain. He won't marry Miss Clarke anyway, after this is over. If he does, he is crazy."

MRS. R. L. HOWELL, WHO IS TO MARRY PERCY D. HAUGHTON

HAUGHTON TO WED WIDOW

Boston and Brookline friends of Percy D. Haughton, head coach of the Harvard football team, are awaiting with eagerness the announcement of the date of his marriage to Mrs. Gwendolyn W. Howell of New York, widow of the Rev. Dr. Richard L. Howell. The news of their engagement, recently announced, was a surprise in this city.

Mrs. Howell was formerly Miss Gwendolyn Whistler of Baltimore, a grand-niece of James McNeil Whistler, the famous American artist.

From her childhood, Mrs. Howell has been widely known for her beauty. As the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delano Whistler, she has a place in Baltimore's best society, and is also well known in London, Paris, Newport and New York. She inherits some of her grandmother's artistic talent and is an accomplished musician.

Mr. Haughton has a national reputation as an athlete. He graduated from Harvard in 1899, where he played on the lacrosse and football teams for several years. After graduating, for two years he was head coach of the Cornell football team and for the last three years he has been head coach of the Harvard football teams.

HEARST PRIZE TEMPTS AVIATOR

Harry Graham Carter, an English aviator now in this city, may try for the W. R. Hearst prize of $50,000 for an aeroplane flight from New York to San Francisco if he succeeds in his plan to make a forty-nine-hour trip from Sandy Hook to Queenstown in the tireless plane which he is having built in Jamaica Plain.

"That $50,000 offer by Mr. Hearst is a very tempting golden prize," he said. "And I am strongly tempted to try for it if I succeed in my English trip."

Boston-Built Aero.

In connection with several well-known automobile men, Carter has taken a lease of a three-story garage of No. 10 Green street, Jamaica Plain, and in a few days' work of constructing the aeroplane in which he will attempt the record flight will be started by a force of mechanics. Mr. Carter will remain in Boston to supervise the work.

"I shall start from Sandy Hook March 19, and I expect to make the flight across the ocean in forty-nine hours," said the aviator.

Mr. Carter estimates the distance he will fly as 2,400 miles. His aeroplane is to be equipped with two thirty-horsepower motors, which will drive twin-screw aluminum propellers. The machine, it is expected, will have a maximum speed of ninety miles an hour, but its average will be between sixty-five and seventy miles.

Gasoline in Tubes.

"I have tried out my motors," he said. "They will run for twenty-seven hours, but I expect to perfect them so that they will run for fifty-four hours. The present plane will carry thirty-six gallons of gasoline."

The aeroplane in which Mr. Carter expects to make the remarkable flight will be tandem. All the frame work is to be made of steel, and the wings are to be covered with a special nonrotting white oiled parchment. The planes are to be fifty feet wide. The frame work is to be of hollow tubing, in order that it may be filled with gasoline. In this way the aviator hopes to carry the necessary fuel without adding undue weight and head resistance. He will carry sufficient food in a compartment to last several days.

HOLDSWORTH SUIT SURPRISE IN LYNN

Friends of Mrs. Mina M. Holdsworth, of Eutaw avenue, Lynn, were astonished when told that Thomas Holdsworth, her husband, who formerly kept a restaurant in Salem and was interested in Lynn real estate, had filed a divorce suit in Reno, Nevada, charging his wife with deserting him. One of them said: "Mr. and Mrs. Holdsworth were married just thirteen years ago and were believed to be happily united. He was West three years and engage in wheat farming in Alberta. Mrs. Holdsworth is prominent in church circles and highly esteemed in Lynn."

GUNSHOP LOOTED FOR SECOND TIME

For the second time is as many months a gun and ammunition shop of F. G. Doell on the second floor of the building at No. 31 Dock square, was broken into early yesterday and several valuable shotguns and rifles and a quantity of ammunition taken. The lock-smith shop on the 2d floor wards on the third floor was also entered. Entrance was gained through forcing the lock of the street door with a jimmy. The police believe that the same persons broke into the building last night that have burglarized Mr. Doell's shop several times before.

WOLGAST AND BROWN TO FIGHT TEN ROUNDS

By TAD.

They never come back, eh? Well, Ad Wolgast is. That is to say he is coming back to fight K. O. Brown a ten-round bout at the National club, New York, on March 3. Cherokee Tom Jones, who had the "Michigan Wildcat" as the call him out West in his day, stuck around New York until he found Dumb Dan Morgan and effected a return go.

"Look here, James," said Dumb Dan, and it was quite a lot for the silent manager to say), "when Wolgast won over Nelson he wouldn't give a return match under any consideration. Nelson offered him most alluring terms. There was nothing doing and it looks as though there never will be anything doing with the loser, but I'll give you a show.

"Brown beat Wolgast easily, and I think he is the coming champion. I have a fighter and I want to prove to the public that he is a better man than Wolgast. You're on. I'll bet them go again, but I'll tell you frankly that your wildcat is to be no pushover. I really think that the Dutchman will stop him before the limit.

"Cherokee Tom" pulled off his false whiskers, lit a big perfecto and pulled a Western sheriff smile.

"So you say, Mr. Morgan," chirped "Tom when he had regained his breath. "So you say. Well, we are all entitled to an opinion. Mike is glad Wolgast will not stop Dutchman of yours so hard and often as Ad did, but he'll turn around and beat him with his left instead of the right. Ad has got warned up to that bum spell, which kins go this time. Would better go on the red light in that corner, or some so that your boy can find his corner easily; he's going to have a rough trip."

They parted, each whisking the other a cigar.

A certain fight follower says that, in his opinion, Wolgast will lick Brown good when they meet this time. "Well, just stalled to Philly," he declares. "He just tried out that arm. He knocked Brown's punches without batting an eye last night, and now that he knows him will drop him good. Why Jones had an awful time getting Morgan to sign. He had to give in to everything and did so willingly. The latter was anxious he was to get on with Brown again. Praise him in your hat and see if I'm right."

Business Success Through Publicity
No. 46

Advertising and Salesmen

Advertising and co-operating salesmanship is the new method of doing business. It is the method that up-to-date concerns are finding pays.

There is an independent cracker manufacturer in the central part of Massachusetts who a short while ago put all of his salesmen on a salary and commission basis. He invited them to the home office, gave them a banquet, at which every man who could throw some light on the interesting topic of selling goods was called upon to narrate his experiences. The talent brought out was remarkable. There were musicians, monologue artists and excellent stump speakers in the aggregation that was gathered.

One man told this experience:

"Talk about advertising," said he, "why, it's the best thing in the world for us boys. It helps us to sell goods. It introduces our goods before we go to a dealer. I was talking to a grocer in Portland, when a woman came in with our advertisement in her hand. 'Have you got those crackers?' and she pointed to the little trademark on the cracker which is being printed in the paper.

"'Why, certainly, madam,' said the grocer, and he pointed to the goods.

"'I will take a box,' said she.

"'And yet,' said this salesman, 'there are some dealers who think advertising doesn't help in the least. They had better go back to the backwoods, where they belong. I tell you the greatest thing that a manufacturer can do is to get an enthusiastic sales-force, tell his salesmen how advertising is going to help them sell goods — and advertising will—and then go out and advertise those goods."

And all the other salesmen of that manufacturer of crackers believe the best thing the boss ever did to help them sell goods was to advertise. The only real way to sell a food product is to advertise it. Advertising will create a demand for it. Advertising will introduce it to the grocers' stores. Advertising will bring repeat demands for it, and the best kind of advertising for local sales is local advertising. If you advertise your product in local newspapers you will reach the consumer and the grocer, and what the consumer wants the grocer wants to sell.

The Boston American is the paper of widest circulation in the New England field. It reaches almost 400,000 people daily when they are at leisure. They can be influenced quicker to buy your goods at such a time. The Boston American reaches the masses and the classes of Boston in a way that no other paper does.

CARRIGAN SIGNS WITH RED SOX

William Carrigan of Lewiston, Me., has resigned and signed. William—we will drop that and hereafter call him Bill—has quit the Hold-Out Club; resigned, with more tact. Also Bill has affixed his John Hancock to a Red Sox contract, which explains what was meant when it was said he had signed.

Carrigan and President John I. Taylor of the Boston American club have reached an agreement, and a week from Saturday the Red Sox catcher will be aboard the Red Sox special, bound for sunny California.

On just what basis owner and player came to terms is something itself only half know just yet, unless one or the other has let the cat out of the bag. That bonus matter is still a secret.

Bill drifted into town yesterday, leaving behind a "sub" to take care of the store down home. Of course it was not Bill's purpose to remain here a minute up in Taylor's office and immediately slap up. No, siree! He came here to be on hand for the B. A. A. game to-night.

But being in Boston Bill meandered to Sox headquarters just to see how the old place really did look. Bill found it to be the same as of yore. President Taylor greeted Bill effusively—if you call giving him a warm handclasp a hint—and talked about everything except baseball. Bill, being a wise one, also followed a like hatch.

After all copies of any interest whatever had been dispensed, John I. remarked that he was going to start West with a team that would put that baseball pennant front nearly worked, but it didn't.

Then it was that Patsy Donovan came to the bat with a suggestion that entitles him to be called the King of Scouts. He suggested that on the afternoon was quite young they take in a vaudeville.

Soon much of the show Bill and Patsy saw and heard cannot be definitely determined. It is known, however, that the two held considerable conversation; that the dulcet voice of the latter was heard in paeans of praise of baseball, Bill, and that the former said that it was just 5:30 o'clock when Bill officially came out of the West.

SPORTS of all SORTS
BY RILEY

BY THIS TIME ALMOST EVERYBODY must be convinced that the majority of sporting writers were right when they classed Ad Wolgast as a choice bit of fistic goods. Every time a champion must fight you may get him as one of three classes: (1)—An accidental "champ," who knows he's not there"; (2)—A real "champ" who's lazy and thinks more of a good time than hard work and continued fame; or, (3)—A lad who is ill-advised. Don't know which class Wolgast belongs to. Some like he's partly all three. Certainly, he will have a hard time licking "K. O." Brown, Owen Moran or Porky McFarland—weight considered—but he'll have to get busy now and do something to one of this trio if he wants to cling to the title of lightweight champion.

* * *

THE CANADIAN HORSES WERE FAR too good for the American contenders at Ottawa, with the exception of Jessie W., sports, the winner of the free-for-all, and the boys who went to the Dominion from Independents may have left a substantial part of their wallets over the border. Riding on the ice is a sport in which Canada excels and the best of American trotters and pacers, compelled to wear calks an inch and a half long on the ice, are always at a manifest disadvantage. The sport called good enough out, even with the thermometer 20 below zero.

* * *

NEW YORK SPORTS ARE ANXIOUS TO see Frank Klaus hook up with "Montana Tom" Sullivan. The husky middleweight of the West, who is said to carry a horse shoe punch in both fists, is now training up and down the "Great White Way," looking for new fields to conquer. In the meantime, Jimmy Gardner of Lowell is not quite ready for the Texan scrapper yet. It looks as if Klaus will be kept very busy before settling down to the herring pond to tackle Billy Papke.

* * *

DICK GLENDON OF THIS CITY, THE clever rowing coach, has the Navy crews at Annapolis in the rowing rank and showing excellent form. On the referee, Boston boatman is crazy to get a crack at Yale crews in the water this Spring, and it seems as if the rival crews would meet. This would be the first meeting of Yale and the Navy on the water since 1907. Sir Richard Henry event would make the Eli scoop up a few holes in the water.

* * *

FROM PRESENT APPEARANCES THE relay race between Brown and Amherst should prove one of the banner events of the B. A. A. athletic meet to-night. Both colleges have turned out some clever sprinters upon the cinder path and if they are able to negotiate the board track in Mechanics Hall, a sensational contest is assured.

* * *

"CARL MORRIS SURE IS A JOKE"—

In fact most of the 'white man's hope' talk belongs to the funny columns and not the sporting page. So says Jack Johnson himself, and it looks like he's right. Jack is now in a bungalow at Ocean Beach, Fla., within a stone's throw of where he trained for his match with Jeffries.

* * *

THE WEIGHT FOR THE BOUT BE tween Digger Stanley, the champion bantam of England, and Young Dyson of Providence, carded for the Thornton, R. I. club on Washington's birthday, is 120 pounds at 8 o'clock. A whole lot of Boston sports are going to Rhody to see the mill.

* * *

THAT LOOKS LIKE A GOOD CARD which Matchmaker Mullen of the Hyde Park A. A. has arranged for Monday night. Neale and Nixon in the final bout should put up a fast scrap. The Kid from Spokane put up a good exhibition last week, when he took on George Algeo at a few moments' notice and a big crowd of Boston sports are anxious to see him in action again.

* * *

JIMMY GARDNER IS CERTAINLY some busy. He will meet Jack Dillon at Pittsburg on February 15 in a six-round bout, and on Washington's Birthday will take on Jack Morgan at Indianapolis in a limited round scrap. On the 28th he will tackle Bob Moha at Milwaukee. Overtures are being made for Gardner to meet Thomas Morrow, a Syracuse Wellesleyweight, in the New York burg.

* * *

YOUNG McGOVERN, THE WOBURN lad who had his jaw fractured in his bout with Eddie Lenny at the Armory, was in the ring again last night—but this time it was as a second for Tommy Furey in the latter's scrap with Kid Harris at Thornton. Paddy Minahan and Kid Goodwin were also in the Attleboro lad's corner.

* * *

EXIT GEORGE "KID" COTTON AS A possible successor to Jack Johnson. That's where they all go. Can't even find a black man's hope—say nothing of a white man's.

* * *

AND THE "MIGHTY" HACKENschmidt went also. There's only one left to come back to Golch and that Zbyszko. Golch won't take on the "WAFER Fat Boy," so the wrestling game will stick to elimination bouts.

HARVARD-YALE CUBS AT ARENA

The Harvard and Yale freshmen play their final hockey games of the season at the Arena this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when they line up for their annual scrap. Although the Eli youngsters have had a fairly successful season, the Crimson cubs are looked upon as the sure winners by the wise ones. To-day's battle is also the final contest in which any Harvard aggregation will take part at the Arena this year.

The Harvard freshmen have played five games this year and won all, rolling up a total of twenty-six points to their opponents' one. Indubitably putting to rout the speedy Milton Academy team, which is credited with being one of the classiest in this vicinity.

Harvard has an exceptionally fast and clever attack, which has found little trouble in advancing the puck through the enemy's defense, and in addition, the Harvardites possess a stiff defense in Wingate and Captain Willetts, the latter being one of the best freshmen points on a freshmen seven at Harvard in years. The Yale attack is good, but not as steady and swoopling as that of its opponents.

RUSTLERS SIGN PITCHER TYLER

George Tyler, the young, but promising pitcher, corralled by the Rustlers during the latter part of 1910 from Lowell, came all the way from Derry, N. H., to-day, accompanied by Mr. Tyler, Sr., and affixed his signature to a contract for 1911.

Tyler have never been considered a hold-out man, but like all the rest of the Dove players he felt that he had a grievance against the club owners. The conference was held to-day at the headquarters, and the outcome was that Tyler left the office pleased with the result of his journey.

Tyler has the speed, but is in her young and inexperienced. With proper training there is no doubt as to his ability to make good with the major leagues. He was scored by scouts in the New England league and admired by many professional team in New Hampshire, and was one of the few wanting pennants owned by the Spinning City lads.

At the conclusion of the minor league season last year he finished out the play-ing schedule with Boston Nationals, and although he was used in but one or two games, his work was satisfactory.

CARRIGAN RESIGNS FROM HOLDOUTS TO SIGN UP WITH SOX

Mutt and Jeff Are Right There for Lincoln's Birthday — By "Bud" Fisher

IT'S A SCREAM——MUTT AND JEFF IN TO-MORROW'S BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN—DON'T MISS IT.

GREAT AMATEUR EVENT OF YEAR IS B. A. A. MEET

The annual B. A. A. games—the greatest Winter amateur athletic event in New England—will be held to-night with an entry list of more than 600 athletes, the largest in the history of the association. Kermit Roosevelt, son of the ex-President, is one of the 600.

More interest has developed in the track events this year than ever before, and it is expected that in every way the meet will be by far the most successful ever held in the East. Accommodations for a record breaking crowd have been made, and it is expected that the capacity of Mechanics building will be taxed by the crowd.

The number of entries in the different events is most significantly indicated by the fact that in the 40-yard handicap twenty-five heats will be necessary to decide the qualifying men for the semi-finals. There will be seven semi-finals. In this one event alone there must be 340 entrants.

The great match of the evening, however, and one which is of national importance, is the mile race for the Hunter Trophy. In this the best amateur milers in the country to-day are pitted against each other, and on the outcome of which depends probably the national mile championship. Such is the quality of the men entered that the result is looked forward to with more interest than any of the other features of the program.

May Be Three-Cornered Affair.

This race may develop into practically a three-cornered affair between Jack Monument of the Irish-American Club, George Bonhag of the same organization, and George Hedlund, the Brookline "grim" runner. The Irish-Americans are also sending over A. R. Kivlat. From the New York A. C. comes Ira A. Paret, a well known distance runner, and because of the great rivalry between the two Gotham associations, a pretty race between these men is alone looked for, to say nothing of who wins the race. Dartmouth has entered Frank Macrean and P. S. Herman, and John H. Taft, the Canadian miler, representing the Toronto Y. M. C. A., is the eighth entry.

Betting to-day was that Hedlund would beat out Monument and Bonhag. His great showing at the South Boston A. A. games, in which he had an easy time, very nearly breaking the track record for the mile, gives his supporters confidence that if something unexpected happens, the Brookline man ought to get a leg on the cup.

George Bonhag is also entered in the three-mile special race from which the five which there are nineteen men who think they can make the distance. Taft, the Canadian, is also entered for this event, and local men who will start are Joe Silva and William H. McVicar of the South Boston Athletic Association. The Irish-Americans are represented by Collins and Bonhag. They are Tom Collins and Charles Maguire. W. Bailey will represent the N. Y. A. C. in this event. Incidentally Bonhag holds the world's record for the three miles, made at Buffalo. His time was 14 minutes 29 2-5 seconds.

Practically every college in New England has entered not only various athletes, but has sent down relay teams. They have been watched very closely and bring on some of the keenest contested races of the evening.

Harvard Has Four Teams.

The Harvard freshmen race the Yale youngsters. With this team Harvard has four relay entries, with teams matched against Yale, Princeton and Williams, the varsity men entered in the first race. Against Yale each man will run one mile, or 780 yards. Among the college races, the second in importance, is that between Dartmouth and Massachusetts Tech. One of the keenest fought team races will be that of the B. A. A. men against the N. Y. A. C., and this is sure to be a hotly contested affair, as there is little love lost between the two great athletic organizations.

Other team races are: Rhode Island State vs. New Hampshire College; Worcester Polytechnic vs. Massachusetts Aggies, Brooklyn "Gyms" A. C. vs. Providence A. C., B. A. A. Midgets vs. Roxbury Latin School Midgets, University of Maine vs. University of Vermont, University of Pennsylvania vs. Cornell, Wales vs. Colby, Boston College vs. Holy Cross, Bowdoin vs. Tufts, Amherst vs. Brown, Syracuse vs. Columbia, Pastime B. A. A. vs. N. Y. A. C.

Entries in the more important events are as follows:

Three-mile special, scratch—William J. Kramer, L. I. A. A. C.; F. H. Jones, Class Memorial Association; George V. Bonag, L. A. A. A.; Tom Collins, L. A. A. C.; Charles Maguire, Dorchan; Robert Simon, Boston; Edward Cahoon, Cahoon Club; John H. Taft, Toronto, Canada; Joseph F. Ferry, Providence A. C.; Joseph E. Ferry, Providence A. C.; Frank M. Cady, Providence A. C.; Frank M. Cady, Providence A. C.; Frank M. Cady

Selfish Daughters

By DOROTHY DIX

A YOUNG man writes me a letter in which he asks me to say something to the lazy, selfish girls who read novels on the parlor sofa while their mothers cook dinner in the kitchen.

This young man says that his mother is a frail, delicate little old woman, while his sister is a great, big, strong, husky girl of eighteen; yet the girl leaves the mother to do every bit of housework while she amuses herself. The brother has pointed out in vain to his sister that it is her duty to help her mother. He can't make any impression on his sister, so her cast-iron selfishness, and so he asks for the assistance of the press.

But what's the use of wasting advice on that sort of a girl, or that sort of a mother? Personally, I decline to shed any tears over mothers whose children are mean, and hateful and inconsiderate. In them, because, in every case, it is absolutely the mother's fault. If a mother raises up a girl to be a spoiled, vain, lazy, selfish little beast she deserves to suffer from it. And she does.

It Is Up to Every Mother

It is up to every mother to decide just how her children shall treat her. If, from the time they are old enough to understand anything at all, she exacts respect and obedience, and difference from them, and teaches them that they must make some return to her for all the love and care she has given them, and the sacrifices she has made for them, she will never have cause to complain of undutiful children. Her children will cherish her, and honor her, and try to lift the burdens from her old shoulders.

On the other hand, if mother makes a doormat of herself, for her children, she must expect to be trampled on and kicked about as is the wont of doormats. If she encourages selfishness and laziness in her children, and makes them feel that they have a right to the best of everything and to indulge themselves in whatever they want, she has no right to look for them to become self-sacrificing angels. "As you sow, so shall you reap," is a law that never fails in the rearing of children.

The problem, however, of the daughter who spends her time in manicuring her finger nails while her mother got more callouses on her hands, at the cook stove or the wash tub, is only too common, and it is one of the most pathetic in life.

Thousands of Such Homes

There are thousands of homes, in which girls never lift a finger to help their mothers. They hear mother getting up early, to prepare breakfast for father and the boys, and they turn over and take another snooze. It never even occurs to them to hustle out, and prepare the morning meal, and let poor old mother lie abed, and rest her weary bones.

They see mother sweeping and scrubbing and cleaning, and bending her rheumatic back; and they let her do it. Likely as not, they go out for a five-mile walk for exercise and to preserve a straight front figure.

They sit down in comfortable rocking chairs and shed tears of sympathy over the persecuted heroine of a novel, while mother washes and irons their fine shirt waists; and they never dream that a shave-driver showed less pity and consideration to his victim than they do the poor, overworked drudge who is giving her very life to their service.

Monumentally Selfish Girls

Of course, the girls are not intentionally cruel to mother. They don't really mean to illtreat her. They are just so monumentally selfish and egotistical that they have never thought of anything but their own pleasure, or anybody but themselves. They really have no idea that mother works because she likes it. It's sort of an eccentricity of hers—a fad, a crank to get up before anybody else in the house is awake to work, and to be still working after everybody else goes to bed. She is a kind of perpetual motion machine that never stops, and of which they take no heed.

They have always seen mother at work. They have always seen her take the worst of everything, and eat the scraps at the table, and wear the made over clothes and stay at home to clean up after the family and clattered up everything, getting ready to go off on the excursion.

They have always seen mother with that tired look on her face and that weary droop to her shoulders; and they don't stop to realize that she hasn't always like that; but service, for them, has etched those lines in the old face and that the old shoulders are bending under the load they have laid upon them.

Nor do they realize that they could work the miracle of the resurrection of mother's lost youth, if, only they would show mother some consideration; if, only they would march mother out of the dressing, and into the parlor, and do for her what she has done for them so long.

But There Comes a Time—

But there comes a time when they know, or, see, there comes a day when they stand above a coffin in which lies a faded little old woman, with work-worn hands folded across her tired breast—at rest for the first time since her children were born.

Be sure that there are no bitterer tears of repentance than those a daughter sheds in such an hour, when she looks back and knows that it was her selfishness and her laziness that helped drive the pain in mother's coffin, and made her glad to lie within it.

Save yourselves that agony of remorse, girls, by helping mother while you have still got her with you.

To-day's Best Story

A YOUNG man, who had not been married long, remarked at the dinner table the other day:

"My dear, I wish you could make bread such as mother used to make."

The bride smiled and answered in a voice that did not tremble:

"Well, dear, I wish you could make the dough that father used to make."

Married Life, the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

The Sacrifice, in Which Helen Enters Upon a Bold Resolve.

IN the first glow of her love for Warren, Helen used to long for some great test, some opportunity of great self-sacrifice by which she could prove her devotion.

Like most romantic emotional women, she had yearned for the deepest expressions of love. While Warren's selfishness and indifference were gradually killing much of this ardor and romance, she was still in love with him. And, at times, she still tried to clothe Warren with all the attributes of her ideals.

And, when he had broken down with the confession "I have just lost $3,000, and have only $1,200 to pay it with," all of her smoldering love and tenderness, all her old longing to prove her love by some great self-sacrifice, was reawakened.

Here was her opportunity. Here was the supreme test. But what could she do? How could she help him now? All that night she had lain awake—many impractical impossible plans whirling through her mind.

Her eager desire to help him, in this crisis had so possessed her that she had not stopped to blame him for his reckless speculation. She had spoken no word of reproach, but had given him instead a great aching sympathy.

Helen's Bold Reserve

If there was only some one to whom she might go—some one from whom she could borrow this $400. She would pay it back afterward, with months of the strictest economy and self-denial. But there was no one to whom she dared turn.

At last, toward dawn, came the most feasible plan of all. Her jewelry! Other women had sacrificed their jewels for the man they loved—why not she? But would they bring enough? She had nothing of very great value except her two diamond rings and a small pearl locket.

And how would she go about getting the money for them? A "pawnshop" was to her hardly more than a vague term. She had seen the three gilded balls over dingy shops and knew in a general way for what they stood. But she had thought of such places as only the refuge of the most destitute and desperate. And now that she herself should enter one of them, and for such a purpose!

And yet that was now her determination. A determination formed in the gray hours of the dawn—just before she fell into a heavy, dream-troubled sleep.

When she awoke she was startled to find it was after 9. Warren had left for the office without awakening her. And she knew that he had been glad to go. It was an escape from dwelling any further on the confession of the night before. To have talked of it again would have meant only increased pain for them both. And to have tried to ignore it would have caused a most strained self-consciousness.

And now the day lay free before her. The day in which the plan she had conceived in the night must be carried through.

She dressed at once in her street suit; told Delia she would try to be back by luncheon, and that she must look after the baby, even though she had to neglect her work. Then she started off. It was with the rings and locket securely wrapped in her purse. Where should she go? And what should she say or do? She had a vague idea that the process of "pawning" was a difficult and mysterious one. And what if one one should see her enter such a place? What would they think?

She had taken a car to a neighborhood of cheap shops, where she had remembered seeing the gilded balls. It was a dingy little place with a miscellaneous collection of watches, old jewelry and silver behind its barred window.

For a moment Helen stood uncertainly at the door. And then, summoning all her courage, she entered.

A sullen-looking, hard featured man was behind the counter. He was examining a broken chain and did not even trouble to glance up.

Helen took from her purse the little tissue paper package and timidly laid it on the counter.

"I would like to—to get some money for these."

The man deliberately finished the chain before he noticed her; then he tore off the paper from the rings and locket and let them fall jingling on the counter.

"How much do you want?" he asked roughly, looking at her shrewdly for the first time.

"I—I should like $400."

He laughed harshly. "Four hundred dollars! Did you think you could get $400 on them?"

The Ordeal of the Pawnshop

"Why, the solitaire cost $200, and the other ring $150, and I, don't know what the locket cost, but it must have been over $100."

"Well, fingrin's one thing and pawnin's another. You'll git no $400 on THEM."

"Then how much can I get?" she asked helplessly.

He examined each one critically through a magnifying glass. Then he threw them back on the counter before her.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars."

Helen gave a little gasp of dismay. "Oh, surely you'll give more than that!"

"Two hundred and fifty dollars—that's what I'll give."

"But they are worth so much more!"

He shrugged his shoulders, not deigning further reply.

"Couldn't you give $300?" she ventured.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars. Take it or leave it. That—all you'll git here."

And he turned away and began to arrange some things on the shelves behind the counter.

Helen waited several moments, but he paid her no further attention. He went on with his work as though she was not there. Then she hesitated, laid them back on the counter and said quietly:

"I will take the $250."

Without comment the man turned around and began to make out a receipt.

"Name?" he asked briefly.

Helen started; she had not thought of that. She must not use her own name.

"Marie Henderson," she murmured, giving the first name that flashed through her mind.

With a half grunt he wrote it down. Plainly he knew the name was not her own. But the fervent of the fourth is not part of a pawnbroker's business.

Slowly He Counted Them

Then he went back to a safe in the rear of the store and returned with $250 in soiled bills. Slowly he counted them out before her. Helen put the money in her purse and hurried from the place. Two hundred and fifty dollars! It was not quite enough—but it would help. And it was the best she could do!

Somehow the way home athrill with the emotionalism of her self-sacrifice. She seemed swept along on the very heights and tenderness when he knew. Ah, he would realize then how much love counted for—how much she was willing to do for his sake!

THE MYSTERY OF THE "VILLA ROSE"

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written. By A. E. W. Mason. Copyright, 1909, 1910, by A. E. W. Mason

Synopsis of Previous Instalments.

MME. CAMILLE DAURAY, elderly, rich, and famous for her jewels, is found strangled in her salon at the Villa Rose on the road to Lac Bourget, near Aix-les-Baines, France. Her maid, Helene Vaughier, is discovered in an upper room, chloroformed and bound. The murder of Mme. Dauray occurs late at night.

Celia Harland, a young and pretty English woman, who came to Aix-les-Baines as Madame's companion, is suspected of complicity in the crime. She is believed to have fled with the murderer in her mistress's motor car.

Harry Wethermill, a young Englishman, who has made a fortune by a scientific invention, and has come to Aix to spend some of it at that resort, has seen the girl in the baccarat rooms of the Villa des Fleurs, and has won her friendship. His friend, Ricardo, who has noticed the growing friendliness, reads of the murder of Mme. Dauray and acquaints Wethermill with the details and the fact that Celia Harland is suspected and at that moment is being sought by the French police.

Wethermill is astounded. He refuses to believe that Celia had a hand in the crime. He begs Ricardo to take him to Hanaud, the shrewdest detective in Paris, now on a vacation at Aix-les-Bains.

Hanaud takes up the case, but warns Wethermill that it looks dark for the girl. He shows the crime was committed by the aid of an accomplice within the villa. There were no signs of an entrance being forced. "Therefore," he says, "some one let the murderer in." Besides Celia and the maid, Helene Vaughier, there was a chauffeur, Servettaz, and a char woman in Madame's household. Hanaud eliminates the charwoman and points out that the chauffeur was away that night visiting his parents in Chambery.

As to the maid and Celia, he shows that Helene had been with Madame Dauray seven years, and acted as her protector. Madame, with a fortune left by her husband, a rich manufacturer of Nancy, had purchased rare jewels, and these "had been an advertisement to thieves to come and rob her."

Celia was a recent acquisition in Madame's household, the detective points out, and the inference is pregnant with suspicion.

Harry, however, contends that Celia, too, may be a victim.

Ricardo, at his urging, tells how he saw her the night before the tragedy outside the baccarat rooms, hysterical, and later how she refused to keep an appointment for the following night, declaring she "had other plans" for that evening—the night of the tragedy.

Hanaud regards this as of extreme importance. Ricardo remembers that once in England, before a great audience, he saw Celia as the central figure in a wonderful spiritualistic seance. She seemed, then, to be in a trance and performed wonderful things in a cabinet on a dark stage. He resolves to say nothing of this to the detective or Wethermill.

Hanaud takes them to the scene of the crime where Perrichet, the Sergeant-de-Ville, describes how he discovered the murder close to midnight at the Villa Rose.

"SHE was quite dead. Her face was swollen and black, and a piece of thin, strong cord was knotted so tightly about her neck and had sunk so deeply into her flesh that at first I did not see it. For Mme. Dauray was stout."

"Then what did you do?" asked Hanaud.

"I went to the telephone which was in the hall and rang up the police. Then I crept upstairs very cautiously, trying the doors. I came upon no one until I reached the room under the roof where the light was burning; there I found Helen Vaughier, the maid, snoring in bed in a terrible fashion."

They Reach the Villa

The four men turned a bend in the road. A few paces away a knot of people stood before a gate which a sergeant-de-ville guarded.

"But here we are at the villa," said Hanaud.

"They all looked up and, from a window at the corner upon the first floor a man looked out and drew in his head.

"That is M. Besnard, the Commissaire of our police in Aix," said Perrichet.

M. Fleuriot was occupied with his own thoughts, and it was not until Besnard stepped forward noisily that he became aware of the group in the garden.

"And the window from which he looked," said Hanaud, "must be the window of that room in which you saw the bright light at half-past nine on your first round?"

"Yes, m'sieur," said Perrichet; "that is the window."

They stopped at the gate. Perrichet spoke to the sergeant-de-ville, who at once held the gate open. The party passed into the garden of the villa.

CHAPTER IV.
At the Villa

THE drive curved between trees and high bushes toward the back of the house, and as the party advanced along it a small, trim, soldierlike man, with a pointed beard, came to meet them. It was he much who had looked from the window, Louis Besnard, the Commissaire of Police.

"Judge for Yourself"

"You are coming then, to help us, M. Hanaud?" he cried, extending his hands. "You will find no jealousy here; no spirit among us of anything but good will; no desire except one to carry out your suggestions. All we wish is that the murderers should be discovered. Mon Dieu, that a crime! And so young a girl to be involved in it! But what will you?"

"So you have already made your mind up on that point!" said Hanaud sharply.

The Commissaire shrugged his shoulders.

"Examine the villa and then judge for yourself whether any other explanation is conceivable," he said; and turning, he waved his hand toward the house.

Then he cried, "Ah!" and drew himself into an attitude of attention.

A tall, thin man of about forty-five years, dressed in a frock coat and a high silk hat, had just come round an angle of the drive and was moving slowly toward them. He wore the soft, curling brown beard of one who has never used a razor on his cheeks, and had a narrow face with bulging eyes of a very light gray, and a round bulging forehead.

"This is the Juge d'Instruction?" asked Hanaud.

"Yes; M. Fleuriot," replied Louis Besnard in a whisper.

M. Fleuriot was occupied with his own thoughts, and it was not until Besnard stepped forward noisily on the gravel that he became aware of the group in the garden.

M. Fleuriot bowed with cordiality.

Nothing Disturbed

"You are very welcome, M. Hanaud. You will find that nothing at the villa has been disturbed. The moment the message arrived over the telephone that you were willing to assist us I gave instructions that all should be left as we found it. I trust that you, with your experience, will see a way where your eyes find none."

Hanaud bowed in reply.

"I shall do my best, M. Fleuriot. I can say no more," he said.

"But who are these gentlemen?" asked Fleuriot, waking, it seemed, now for the first time to the presence of Harry Wethermill and Mr. Ricardo.

"They are both friends of mine," replied Hanaud. "If you do not object I think their assistance may be useful. Mr. Wethermill, for instance, was acquainted with Celia Harland."

"Ah," cried the Judge; and his face took on suddenly a keen and eager look. "You can tell me about her, perhaps?"

"All that I know I will tell readily," said Harry Wethermill.

Into the light eyes of M. Fleuriot there came a cold, bright gleam. He took a step forward. His face seemed to narrow into a great sharpness. In a moment, to Mr. Ricardo's thought, he ceased to be the judge; he dropped from his high office; he dwindled into a fanatic.

"She is a Jewess, this Celia Harland?" he cried.

"No. M. Fleuriot, she is not," replied Wethermill. "I do not speak in disparagement of that race, for I count many friends among its members. But Celia Harland is not one of them."

"Ah!" said Fleuriot; and there was something of disappointment, something, too, of incredulity, in his voice. "Well, you will come and report to me when you have made your investigation." And he passed on without another question or remark.

Watched Him Go

The group of men watched him go, and it was not until he was out of earshot that Besnard turned with a deprecating gesture to Hanaud.

"Yes, yes, he is a good judge, Mr. Hanaud—quick, discriminating, sympathetic; but he has that bee in his bonnet, like so many others. Everywhere he must see Traffaire Dreyfus. He cannot get it out of his head. No matter how insignificant a woman is murdered, she must have letters in her possession which would convict Dreyfus. But you know! There are thousands like that—good, kindly, just people in the ordinary ways of life, but behind every crime they see the Jew."

Hanaud nodded his head.

"I know; and in a Judge d'Instruction it is very embarrassing. Let us walk on."

Half-way between the gate and the villa a second carriage-road struck off to the left, and at the entrance to it stood a young, stout man in black leggings.

"The chauffeur?" asked Hanaud. "I will speak to him."

The Commissaire called the chauffeur forward.

Desperate Desmond

Desmond has sprung a trap on Claude and that's no figure of speech either. The trap door lead to the cellar of the farm house where Desmond and Claude were shooting dice in yesterday's picture. As you no doubt remember, the villain put one over on our brave young hero, his promises to the contrary notwithstanding.

Claude will not be lonesome in the cellar. It's chock full of rats, and they will keep Claude's mind off his other troubles for a while. Those rats are hungry, and they'd just as soon eat a hero as anybody else. But Claude is not going to be eaten without putting up a fight; you can bet your sweet life on that.

The best way to kill rats is to drown them, and if you haven't got any water handy, cider will do just as well. Luckily, the farmer's cellar is plentifully supplied with cider, and all Claude has to do is to turn on the faucets. The next question is, How is he going to get out of the cellar?

Before we answer that question, let us return to Desmond and Rosamond. The cowardly cur is pouring kerosene all over the floor, and we suspect him of hatching some nefarious design. He is not the kind of guy who would go to all the trouble for nothing. Have patience a moment, and you'll see what his game is.

Oh, yes! He wanted to set fire to the barrel, and use the kerosene to make it burn better. How stupid of us not to have guessed that before! If it affects to devise thrilling climaxes, but it isn't always so easy to save the hero from the perils we get him into. However, we'll probably think of something in time to put it in Monday's paper.

Daysey Mayme Looks Us Over

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

"I HAVE been in some of the well-elegant homes in Brookline and Boston," wrote Daysey Mayme Appleton to her sister, "and have collected a lot of suggestions, helpful to you in furnishing your home.

"To begin with, your furniture must be fat. The chairs must look as if they had reached the fat age of pleasure, wealth and ease as if they had waddled into the room, and dropped into the first corner, too heavy, too fat, too asthmatic and too breathless to waddle a step farther.

"Have them covered in some delicate shade; pale pink or pale blue. This adds to their look of fashion and fat, and gives them a greater resemblance to the woman of the house. A plethoric footstool in front of each chair, and two before the very corpulent sofa, and a table with bow legs are necessary.

All Bowlegged Furniture

"It is important that all the furniture be bowlegged; any piece of furniture with straight limbs puts the owner in a lower social status. A straight-legged chair is an difficult for a social climber to overcome as to be caught carrying an under-sized muff.

"Cover the walls with immense oil paintings, each in a frame of gilt, about four feet wide; the quality of these paintings isnt as important as their size and number.

"Save enough out of your allowance to buy vahzes as large as they can be had and don't ask for 'vases.' That might suggest to the clerk some little, feminine dive, but graceful article which would look pretty and home-like holding a rose or two; but you don't want anything of that sort. You want vahzes. Get them very tall, and so round they look like a fat woman in a Before-Taking advertisement for a straight front corset.

How to Place the Vahzes

"Get a yardstick when you place those vahzes on the mantel, and make your measurements exact; each vahze must be with in the smallest fraction of an inch the same distance as its mate from a very fat clock, swathed in gilt, in the middle. They should be at least two pair of these vahzes on the mantel, and three pair on the floor beside the fireplace. Buy all you can afford and display every one of them. Show the world that you can buy vahzes.

"Have this room open into a conservatory; a conservatory is absolutely necessary because it sounds so much more than it costs. Fill it with ferns that look tired of city life, and in the centre have a marble figure of the kind that we have in the cemeteries back home.

"I almost forgot the dog. Any kind of a dog will do, so that he is fat. Under the refining influence of steak and cream and alley dog will soon look like an imported thoroughbred, so it will not be necessary for you to spend any money buying dogs.

She Had Six Pianos

"In one of these homes the woman told me she had six pianos, but I don't know what to advise you in this particular. Individual pianos, the same as individual butter plates, might be rather rapid for you.

"Perhaps I had better take the matter of six pianos up with the Chaperon Department of our favorite paper."

His Idea of a Tourist

"I'VE just about made up my mind," said the retired merchant, "to go to Europe in the Spring and spend several weeks visiting historic places.

"There's no law against that," returned the bookkeeper, "but I give you fair warning that when you get back from Europe I don't want to see you hanging around this joint telling windy stories of what you saw.

"The fellow who has just returned from his first trip abroad is the greatest bore on earth.

"Old Major Zimmerman went to England and Scotland last Summer and after he returned he infested this hotel, telling his abominable stories, until I resorted to violence and pushed him resolutely into the alley.

"He had seen all the old chronic castles and the chestnutty battlefields and such things. He visited the ruins of Kenilworth and saw the stairway down which Amy Robsart took a header, and he visited Stratford, and pushed himself along the banks of Ayr, and took a full out of the banks and braes of Bonnie Doon.

"He had a string of fishy stories about Sir Walter Scott and Robert Burns.

"He went into ecstasies over the Scottish lakes, which are not in the same class with our own. It makes me tired to hear a man boosting the puniest lake in Europe when we have the real article at our doors.

"But the thing that incensed me and caused me to kick the major out of the back door was the fact that he never saw anything worth seeing. He went to the same old places and saw the same old things that everybody sees.

"I asked him if he visited the place where Heenan and Sayers fought their memorable battle, and he never even heard of that historic fight.

"Great Britain was the cradle of pugilism, and we should regard her with reverence on that account even if she does make a poor showing nowadays with her Gunner Moir and her Bombardier Wells. She produced great men a century ago, and the size of the purse didn't cut much figure.

"I would give a good deal to visit the grave of the Tipton Slasher and to place a few roses on the resting places of Jack son and Molyneux, but a hotelkeeper never has time to walk around a block, let alone going to England, and when he does a tourist fresh from the old country and asks for some information about things of real interest the doggone tourist begins to tell of a seven by nine island where Mary Queen of Scots was held prisoner.

"Great Britain isn't interesting as it used to be a little over a hundred years ago. They used to have a prodde banging every morning in the halcyon days. Sometimes three or four were swung off to gether, and the best people the elite of London town, rented neighboring windows by the week or month, in order that they might have an unobstructed view of the festivities.

"Thus worthy landlords always had a source of revenue and the real estate boosters the road to Tilburn was in great demand. The hangmen—

"You are a bloodthirsty old ruffian," interrupted the retired merchant, and he left in disgust.

Turn Over and Forget It

By WINIFRED BLACK

"THE dressmaker is coming to-morrow and not a speck of thread in the house for her. That machine ought to be put in order, too, and, oh, horrors! shall I have Sunshine's best frock back's bine or rose and lace?

"I don't see what on earth is the matter with the gas bill; it gets bigger every month. It's so warm I know the fruit trees are all going to bud and then we'll have a storm and there won't be a peach in the yard.

"Whose dog is that howling that way? Some one ought to ring on the police. For pity's sake hear that cat!! What awful heart stopping shrieks! I believe cats are the evil ones sometimes. I don't see how any one can pretend to like them. There's that howl again. I don't like people who like cats. I believe they are catty themselves.

"The cook is getting awfully careless, the dessert was scorched to-night.

"I wonder if those gardens at Hunter's school are the right sort. He seems to be getting so tough. Oh——

And, with a bounce of impatience and anger, I turned my face to the window, and there in the shadowy light of the waning moon stood the pear tree—tall and slender and full of gentle dignity.

A soft cloud floated across the face of the crescent moon and a little wind sprung up from the cloud, and the pear tree bowed and waved her graceful arms, and seemed to call to me in the quiet night I heard the voice of Spring calling—calling from far, far away.

And for that the window was faint and hard to hear, but the pear tree knew what it meant, for she waved her graceful arms and bowed her feathery head, and presently the apple tree answered and then the peach trees began to whisper among themselves, and the soft wind sang so softly and all my petty cares were gone!

And to think that all that time the moon and the clouds and the pear tree and the apple tree of the spring were outside of the window waiting for me to notice them. And I never would have noticed them at all if I hadn't happened to turn over.

From this minute on I'm going to make it a practice to turn over when I get to worrying, turn over and look out of the window and forget everything but what I see through the clear glass of the pane.

There are so many ways to turn over. Here's the new book, that's a good way; there's the concert, that's an excellent way. There's a chat with an old friend, that's a fine way. There's the call to some good work, that's a good plan; there's the plunge into some somebody else's troubles and trying to help them, and that's the best way of all.

There's always something sweet and beautiful or at least something different to see if we only turn over and look out of the window.

It is so——nd forget now to worry.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

REACTION LEAD BY RAILROADS

The stock market stands up more than ordinarily well under many attacks again it seems to be a test of its absorptive power. Yet the ability in the opinion that the best and safest position is a trading one.

$ $ $

That the basis has been laid for further improvement in prices there is quite a general belief, but as there are some uncertainties ahead it is just as well to be rather conservative. Many of the professionals and outsiders that pulled out of stocks from the long side at the present juncture they think it best to wait for developments.

$ $ $

The prospect of a higher valuation for securities is good, but as the valuation might change temporarily at any time, circumspection will be needed in getting back to the safety. Several large holdings in the long run have been sold lately, and should these be replaced this buying would lift the average of prices above that a little.

$ $ $

Money conditions the world over are more favorable than has been known for years, and this, of course, is largely responsible for the spirit of optimism now prevailing. That security prices are depressed unduly in spots is conceded, and while there recently was a disposition to let investments remain so much higher than before that point is now naturally gone into shares which pay so well.

$ $ $

Delaware, Lackawanna & Western in the calendar year 1910 had gross earnings of $36,052,920. This compares with $34,815,011 in 1909, $32,908,804 in 1908 and $36,206,475 in the banner year 1907. The increase over 1909 amounted to $1,237,920, or more than 3.5 per cent.

A long account is reported as being peddled out in Southern Pacific. There have been offerings on rallies, say reports in Saturday's news to be largely on a scale. Hardiman stocks are also boomed especially on the dividend announcement, which perhaps furnishes a good opening to realize on stocks that may be the buying of Southern Pacific is of a high order and will rather exceptions it to go up otherwise.

$ $ $

It is argued that Reading should respond to the very large rise in Lackawanna Coal on the New York curb, bulls on Reading affecting belief that this company will some day make a segregation of assets similar to that made by the latter road. Much will be the decision in the government's suit under the commodity clause of the Hepburn act.

$ $ $

Could stocks attracted considerable attention because of the passing of Reading since between the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific. There is said to be no foundation for the ridiculous rumor that the Union Pacific would buy control of Denver & Rio Grande. They are parallel and competing.

$ $ $

Federal Mining has made a new high records for both issues because the January earnings are at a rate sufficient to provide for the preferred dividend and leave the common equal to nearly 10 per cent on the common.

$ $ $

Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke has advanced on the theory that the Steel Trust is going to buy it. This company has been burning the stockholders of the Virginia company for several years.

SONGS OF IRELAND WIN ON HOOK NIGHT

The songs of Ireland were more popular with the crowd than any other form of entertainment offered by the amateurs at the Scollay Square Theatre last night, and South Boston misses carrying off the honors with those tuneful old melodies. "The River Shannon" caused the large and small change to flow in the direction of Mary Mc-Hale, as well as winning first prize, while May Cavin was a close second with "The Pretty Irish Rose." The large number of ladies present were particularly enthusiastic, and everybody enjoyed the difficulties experienced by the victims of the "hook" ins the other devices used to trip the nervous and the unwary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Arguing that Russia has violated the treaty of 1832 in a series of Stones by denying Jewish citizens of this country the privileges of American travelers, Representative Parsons of New York introduced a resolution in the House calling upon President Taft to declare the treaty void.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The stock market opened irregular today, the gains and losses about equally divided except in rail road shares which showed a general drop Canadian Pacific, however, was an exception. It was up 1¾ points. American Smelting advanced ¾, United States Steel was unchanged. Union Pacific, Reading and Southern Pacific were off fractionally.

The curb market was moderately active and firm at the opening.

American shares were harder in tone on the London market, although the movement was not particularly broad.

ELEANOR STODDARD, WHO DEMANDS THE AMERICAN DAILY

ELEANOR TILDEN STODDARD

There is a pretty little girl in Cohasset, eight years old, who is responsible for two families buying both the Sunday and the daily AMERICAN. She is Eleanor Tilden Stoddard, and she is a staunch admirer of the characters who appear in the funny pictures printed once in a while in the daily and Sunday issues.

Her father, G. Z. Stoddard, whose business is at No. 28 Bromfield street, Boston, used to buy the paper occasionally, and Eleanor thus became friendly with Hogan Mutt and Jeff, the Katzies, Hawsoncum and their companions.

Since this friendship was established Mr. Stoddard buys the paper every night and Sunday, but this change wasn't brought about at once. On the plea that the paper was missing little Eleanor would talk over to her Grandpa Tilden's. There she would always find the paper.

Grandpa Tilden had discovered that the AMERICAN was an attraction and having the little girl desire, wanted to please her and perhaps make sure to get his paper come and see him as often as possible.

After a time Papa Stoddard began to wonder at the frequent and prolonged visits of Eleanor to her grandfather's, and asked her. This was the answer he got:

"It's because you forgot to bring the AMERICAN, papa. I love the funny pictures. It's a great fun, and when you don't bring it I know I can get it over to grandpa's."

Father Stoddard is now buying the AMERICAN every day and Sunday, little Eleanor is happy, and so is Grandpa Tilden, for the old cronies can now have something with her on every visit a copy of her favorite paper for fear he might have missed it.

AMATO MAKES HERCIC LUNA

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Il Trovatore" was sung at the Boston Opera House last night by a cast of principals from the Metropolitan Opera House. The whole atmosphere of Manrico, brought Amato as Count of Luna, and Marie Rappold sang Leonora. The Azucena was Maria Claessens.

The principal feature of the passionate and vivid performances of this familiar old opera was not the Manrico of Slezak nor the Leonora of Rappold, but the Luna of Amato.

Amato's Luna was the hero of the opera. How long has this singer been with us and why is he not the sympathy of sentimental audiences with his "Miserere" and his fiery declamations. Although Leonora loved him, Manrico was just a thief.

Amato Wins Audience.

At his first meeting with his rival Luna, the latter beat him in a duel and left him for dead on the field of battle. Afterward, instead of what he will do to Luna, Manrico leaves his bride-to-be and leads his troops against the Count. Azucena takes him by tie ear to the lockup, and he ends his first act.

It is evident that Verdi intended his Luna to be considerable of a man, the several generations of mock and lowly burlesque, accustomed to hold the center of the stage to the tenors, has disserved the character.

The audience last night was with Luna all the time. From his first entrance Amato took command. His noble voice thrilled and enchanted everybody. The magnificence of his singing of the "Miserere" was surpassed by his sonorous delivery of the famous declamation to the tavern and his passionate duet with Leonora in the last act completed the yield to him.

Stirring Performance.

Maria Rappold is a thoroughly acceptable Leonora, which is saying much, for this part is one of the most difficult in the entire opera and many world-famous singers have failed in it.

Slezak as Manrico for the second time here this season. His singing of the Serenade was ordinary and his declamation in the "Miserere" without distinction. In the other scenes he redeemed the part, but act insofar in a most wonderfully effective manner.

Maria Claessens strove earnestly to give a sensible Azucena, and would have won applause for occasional bits of bad cooked were for occasional bits of bad singing. The chorus sang for the most part very well, although the Gypsies who wielded the hammers in the "Anvil Chorus" didn't time themselves to the tempo.

Moranzoni was responsible for a performance which never ceased to be stirring and enjoyable.

RATSHESKY TOURS EUROPE.

A feature of the trip will be a visit to some of the Mediterranean ports, Egypt and the Holy Land. Mr. Ratshesky, who is prominent in some business interests, but will be mostly given to rest and recreation.

OBJECT TO U. S. FORTS ON CANAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Administration officials are not a bit flurried over the report from Buenos Aires that Great Britain is unofficially sounding European powers with a possible view to protesting the fortification of the Panama Canal. Nothing is known of any such move, and expressions from European critics here been in general to the effect that the United States had a perfect right to fortify its possessions.

TRIED TO KILL SPANISH LEADER

SABADELL, Spain, Feb. 11.—An unsuccessful attempt was made here to-day to assassinate Deputy Lerroux, Republican leader and chief radical in the Spanish Cortes.

Five shots were fired at him but all missed. Three suspects were immediately arrested. The would-be assassins are believed to be members of a rival political faction, as Lerroux had come here for a political conference.

DOG WITH BANK ACCOUNT DEAD

"Les," Somerville's famous dog with a bank account and mascot of the Fifth Regiment during the Spanish War, is dead in that city. He was a great favorite of Somerville children. A gold mounted collar, presented to the dog by the people of Somerville, who for years contributed to his support, has been taken from his neck and will be preserved.

A Want Advt. is often the road to fortune.

Special Notice.

DIABETES

The most valuable result of 20 years' work at Civil Engineering in the Tropics was the important discovery of a simple, harmless herb that is an actual specific for Diabetes, a disease hitherto considered incurable. To prove this it will give immediate relief in the most aggravated cases. A 25c. package (enough for one week's supply) for only 25c.

Many people order and see how quickly Diabetes Herb will reduce the specific gravity and the sugar, relieve weight and pain in the back. Boiled and dried like stewing prunes. Address Dr. F. M. Ames, Box 33-B, Whitney Point, N. Y.

DEVIL IN REAL LIFE—How the man who wrote the famous play, "The Devil," has followed the character he portrayed. This fascinating fact story will be a feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

Lodge's Election Still Tainted. The Foulness Has Not Yet Been Removed

Mr. Lodge's over-zealous personal newspaper organs should restrain their exuberance. District Attorney Pelletier's announcement that he will not submit the Senatorial election matter to the Grand Jury of Suffolk County because he has no legal evidence is good enough so far as it goes, but this does not cover the entire case against Lodge.

Mr. Pelletier is District Attorney of Suffolk County only. His jurisdiction extends no further. He is a just man, who does his duty.

BUT THE REAL, THE SERIOUS CHARGES OF COERCION AND PROBABLE CORRUPTION WERE MADE IN OTHER COUNTIES.

These charges were made by two well-known Boston writers, in newspapers published in widely different parts of the State—the Fall River Globe and the Worcester Post.

The writers who made these charges are well known. But nothing has been done so far to verify or deny these accusations. The allegations made by these writers deal with Republican, not Democratic, legislators.

HOW CAN ANYBODY SAY THAT MR. LODGE'S ELECTION IS NOT TAINTED UNTIL THESE CHARGES ARE DISPROVED?

It may be well, also, for Mr. Lodge's personal organs to recall the case of the notorious Senator Lorimer of Illinois. Everybody in Illinois knew that Lorimer was elected by corrupt votes. His election took place on May 26, 1909.

But it was ONE YEAR LATER, after Lorimer had taken his seat in the Senate, that legal evidence to prove this corruption was obtained.

And even with this overwhelming proof Lorimer has been able to retain his seat, to the shame and disgrace of the entire nation.

The investigation into the Lodge Senatorial scandal has not even been begun in Bristol and Worcester Counties. It must go on.

And until all the charges are disproved the taint and foulness will remain!

Fortunately another Senatorial scandal in Massachusetts is unlikely. It will not be long now before the people will elect Senators by direct vote, and that will be the end of stand-pat reactionary Senators, and the end of scandals such as Lorimer has brought upon the country.

Senator Lodge's recent speech shows that he has learned nothing. He is still for the old way of choosing Senators. HE COULD NOT BE A SENATOR under any other system.

He says that if Senators were elected by the people the Senate would become merely a duplicate House of Representatives. That is not true, of course.

The Senators would, indeed, become representatives of the people, and not representatives of the corporations. The more the Senate comes to resemble a House of Representatives in that respect the better.

It was never the intention of the creators of this government to have a department of the government specially set apart for representatives of the corporations. The corporations have influence enough—too much influence with the government—without having a special department ready to interfere with the plans and purposes of the people as voiced by their direct representatives.

Lodge also objects to the recall of Judges. The same impulse which moves him to object to the election of Senators by the people moves him to object to the recall of a corrupt or incompetent Judge.

Judges are human beings, LIABLE TO ALL THE FAULTS OF HUMAN BEINGS. They are to be highly respected when they are honest and capable, but they are all the more to be detested when they are dishonest or incapable. For bad Judges are MUCH MORE DANGEROUS to the public welfare than unworthy officials of other kinds.

As there is no office in which an official can do more harm than in a judicial office, so there is no office from which there is greater need that an incompetent or corrupt official should be removed.

There is a rebellion throughout the land against corporation domination in politics. There is a determination TO RESTORE THE GOVERNMENT TO THE HANDS OF THE PEOPLE, a determination to have the government conducted impartially in the interest of all the people.

It is a sad fact that no department of the government has been more under the control of the corporations than the judiciary. Most of the men who have become Judges have previously been corporation lawyers, and many of them expect to be corporation lawyers again after they have ceased to be Judges. Indeed, Judges have not infrequently resigned from the Bench of our higher courts beguiled by the big fees that corporations pay.

It is a fact also that many Judges have been made Judges by the corporations because they had been corporation lawyers, and because, it was hoped, they would, on the Bench, continue to be corporation lawyers.

As a plain matter of experience, THE LAW HAS BEEN DISTORTED not in the interest of the public, but IN THE INTEREST OF THE CORPORATIONS.

There is very little danger—even under the recall—that the judiciary will swing too far to the popular side.

There are at present a great many extremely able and scrupulously honest Judges. Such men have the respect, almost the reverence, of the whole people.

So great is the universal respect entertained for just Judges that it covers and protects even those who are undeserving.

It is therefore safe to say that the recall could never be effectively employed against any Judge who was not conspicuously unfit.

In demanding the recall of conspicuously unfit Judges the AMERICAN speaks confidently for the whole people.

Not Guilty!

BOOKLAND

EDITED BY EDWIN MARKHAM

EDWIN MARKHAM

Roswell Field and John Vance Cheney, Associate Editors

NOW that Lowell and Stedman have passed into the silence, Professor George E. Woodbury rises as the most distinguished figure in the ranks of American critics. His shelf of books is growing, and he has written no chapter that is not clear and coercive, sane and suggestive.

He now comes to us with a volume called "The Inspiration of Poetry," a book which includes a discussion of a select few of the elder poets, each representing the crest of some great wave of thought. Marlowe, the morning star of Shakespeare's dawn; Byron, the plunging planet of the literary revolution; Tasso, the harper of life's elegiac waft; Lucretius, the bearer of the keys of the ancient science—these are the poets that Mr. Woodbury discusses with dispassionate apprehension.

Mr. Woodbury opens with a fine essay on "Poetic Madness," in which he tells us that "the poet is the most lawless of men because the life that is in him refuses to be bound in the old births of time. He breaks all conventions, he trampules on all superstitions, he violates all barriers, for he brings his own world with him, and new horizons. Emerson said that 'the birth of a poet is the chief event in chronology.'"

Mr. Woodbury's last essay, "Inspiration," sums up his contention that emotion is the base of genius, and that capacity for emotion is the test of genius. This capacity leads naturally to the eternal unrest of those who possess the sorrowful great gift. He places the power of emotion among the evolutionary forces of the world; art is the means of freeing that power.

Jane Addams's "Twenty Years at Hull House"

Jane Addams has come to be recognized as a granitic force for right living and honest thinking. And the Hull House Settlement in Chicago, which is the externalization of her spirit of unselfish service to humanity, is one of the landmarks of the social progress of the last half century.

Miss Addams, in "Twenty Years at Hull House," gives the history of the founding and the ministry of that settlement. She details the steps by which she groped her way to the idea and began to draw within the scope of the institution "all the pathetic efforts for human good" going on about her. She describes with dramatic pen the various experiments in human fellowship and the various efforts to improve labor conditions, efforts to make possible for the poor the arts that are for all men the solace of the spirit.

The Hull House idea has seeded itself in almost every large city of the nation. The settlement house is always the common, human meeting ground where the comfortable and the cultured, no doubt, learn more in the end than do the poor and the ignorant to whom they would minister. For the settlement, face to face with conditions, teaches its workers the vastness and the complexity of the social problem; teaches them that charity only increases and perpetuates the conditions it would cure; only presses home the need for society to organize a social order that shall insure to every man work and the fruits of his work, and so shall make poverty unnecessary—poverty, which the Bible tells us, is "the destruction of the poor."

A New Novelist of Power

Mr. F. A. Wedgewood is a writer new to some of us, but one whose name should be starred in one's catalogue of novelists to be watched for.

His "Shadow of a Titan," come newly from hand, falls into the class with Mrs. Voynich's "Gadfly," Will Livingston Comfort's "Routledge Rides Alone" and Richard Behan's "One Braver Thing." It falls into the class of large-horizoned, many-colored life, life that is blood-thirsty with a warm humanity.

One has no love for De la Camera, the hero, who stalks through this romance of adventure and fanfaronade. His strong, terrible nature is a blend of Machiavelli and Savanarola; but Ma. Wedgewood, with much skill, brings us to view him from the God-ward side, brings us to hate his monstrous cabals and cruelties, yet to see behind the man the earnestness of an enthusiast, an ego-intoxicated adventurer, ever working, whether through good or evil means, for a prodigious though preposterous purpose.

The style of this novel is often notable, with pictures crammed into epithets and with phrases quick with surprise, as when we read "that the wild music traveled up by mighty arpeggios to the last crown of thunder."

A Cheery Book for You or Your Friend

"Old People" is a book of hopeful, helpful essays on growing old. It comes from the pen of Harriet E. Paine, herself now done with life except in a long train of influence still working in the lives of women who were her pupils in and about Boston.

The book is introduced with reverent affection by Alice Brown, who says that those simple colloquial sketches are but scant index to the richness and poesy of Miss Paine's well ordered mind.

The unpretentious papers were prepared as the writer felt growing upon her the heavy afflictions of losing both sight and hearing. To read them is to have a new honor for the gallantry of the human spirit fighting the silence and the dark.

A person wishing to cheer a sick friend or to hearten a despondent or to fortify a cheerful life will do well to pass on this brave little book.

Zane Grey's New Book for Boys.

"The Young Forester," by Zane Grey, tells of a boy who goes to a little town in the Southwest to become a forester. Dr. Zane Grey is remembered as the author of those fine out-of-door books for adults—"The Last of the Plainsmen" and "The Heritage of the Desert."

His boys' book, "The Short Stop," made a hit with young folk, and no doubt his "Young Forester" will also have a host of friends. It tells of a boy's study of forestry, a boy who discloses some big thieveries in forest lands. The plunderers attempt to down the boy, and, of course, the right comes out on top. Incidentally, we learn much about the woods and the need of caring for them.

Books and Bookmen

E. Phillips Oppenheim was eighteen years old when his first short story was accepted and only twenty when his first novel appeared. He is now forty-four years old and lives in great contentment with his wife and young daughter in "a cottage on the east coast with a view of the North Sea from his windows." It is interesting to note that Mr. Oppenheim married in this country and his wife is his constant companion both at home or when traveling. All of his work is done by dictation, both the rough draft and the finished effort. He divides his time equally between work and play, devoting most of the latter to golf and shooting.

The French sales of Rostand's plays have been phenomenal, especially so in the case of "Cyrano de Bergerac," which probably has no equal in all literature as a seller, with the single exception of Shakespeare. The sales of Rostand's plays as given out by Charpentier & Pasquelle, the Paris publishers, does not of course include the translations which in the cases of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "L'Aiglon," must have amounted to hundreds of thousands of copies.

This is the list:

Les Romatesques	42,000
La Princesse Lointaine	41,000
La Samaritaine	42,000
Cyrano de Bergerac	365,000
L'Aiglon	271,000
Chantecler (up to April, 1910)	158,000

"A Diary of Napoleon's Life in His Own Words" (Houghton Mifflin Co.) is valuable to those who desire to study the character of the great Corsican as first hand. The following extract shows his arrogance and ambition in the most convincing way.

"Count Bertrand and I met for our concluding session in a room where, according to Austrian custom, a dais had been installed with a chair of state representing that of the Austrian Emperor. On entering I asked what this meant, and on being told I said to the Austrian Minister: 'Once, before we begin, you had better have that chair taken away, because I have never yet seen a chair set higher than others without immediately wanting to get into it.'"

Missouri leads the way in perpetuating the name and fame of her illustrious son, Mark Twain. It is proposed that the State shall purchase the boyhood home of the author, which still stands within the corporate limits of Hannibal, and that a $10,000 monument be erected there, a site for which will be furnished by the Hannibal Commercial Club. The proposed site is Lovers' Leap, the bluff overlooking the Mississippi near the cave made famous in "Tom Sawyer."

"The Lion's Skin," a novel by a new writer, Rafael Sabatini, is announced for publication by D. Appleton and Company about the middle of the month. The action of most of the story takes place in England, during the years preceding the Restoration.

It is said that the thirteen short stories Ethel Train has written are all studies of her own little boy and observations she has made of the effect of his character on different persons with whom he comes in contact. The stories are soon to appear in book form.

The marriage question will receive perhaps more than its usual share of attention this Spring. Among the announcements leading to this conclusion are "Love and Marriage," a treatise by Ellen Kay, the Swedish writer, and translated by Arthur G. Chater, which Putnam Sons will bring out.

Frederick A. Stokes Company will produce Mrs. Margaret Stephens's "Woman and Marriage" and "The Evolution of Marriage" is also to appear shortly.

Mrs. Barnet's "Dragnet" is being translated into French and Italian, so eager have Europeans become to read Mrs. Barnet's description of our national life. A London edition has already been contracted for.

Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper" has been dramatized by French by Vladimir Bienstock and Michael Carr, and the play was recently produced at the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre in Paris.
